THE KUKLUX KLAN.

Present Condition and Purposes of the Order.

Interesting Statements by Observers in the South.

The Kuklux Waiting for the Ascendency of the Democrats.

Hopes of the Latter to Regain the Control of the Nation.

Oath of the Supreme Degree of this Remarkable Order.

Although the strict enforcement of the Kuklux law in some portions of the South has had the effect to generally decrease the outrages committed by the Klan, there is abundant evidence that the atrocious order is not extinct, but is only waiting for the coming of a more favorable time to again commence those fiendish murders and torturings which have made the name of Kuklux more infamous than any of history. Recent arrivals in this City from the Southern States show that the condition of the South has been much improved in consequence of the sternness of the United States officials in dealing with these miscreants. In those counties where there have been a number of convictions under the Kuklux law, the order is entirely extinct, and in other sections it is quiescent, but is yet an organized body, having its distinctive signs and passwords, and holding meetings regularly, but not attempting for the present to commit any very serious outrages. A recent incident in Charlotte, N.C., shows the straits to which the Kuklux have been reduced by the vigor of the Administration for the recreation indispensable to a subject of the Invisible Empire. The last heavy snow-storm reached so far south as this town, and the inhabitants were astonished to find their streets covered with snow. The circumstance was seized by a number of young men, who were all recognized as members of the Kuklux, to wreak a little of their spite upon "niggers and white radicals," without incurring any of the penalties of that horrible unconstitutional law of Congress by which so many of their brethren had been sent to jail for merely killing or maiming human beings for their political opinions. Anxious to indulge their proclivities, and at the same time avoid the law, these fellows hit upon the happy expedient of snow-balling the objects of their hatred, and did it in such a way that the sport was almost as exhilarating as their old-time method of tying men and women naked to trees and whipping them until they died from exhaustion. Every negro and every white man known to be a Radical, who that morning passed the corner where these miscreants were gathered, was pelted with snow-balls, packed so tight as to be as hard as rocks. These missiles were so effective that several who were struck by them fell insensible, to the great delight of the chivalry, and one poor negro, who was thus stunned, was pounced upon by the gang, who trampled upon him until he was so badly injured that his recovery from his wounds was for some time doubtful. Thirty persons were maltreated to a greater or less extent by these ruffians, and the eye-witness, from whom this statement is derived and to whom all the assailants and assailed are well known, assured the writer that to his positive knowledge every one of the former were members of the Kuklux, and all the victims well-known Republicans. During the time the "sport" was going, many white men known to be in sympathy with the Klan passed and repassed without molestation, which fact was held to be a strong proof that the affair was intended to be something more serious than appeared upon the surface.

This incident is declared by recent observers in the South to be typical of the present condition of affairs. Just now there are none of those horrible outrages committed, the recital of which, before the Kuklux Committee of Congress made the civilized world shudder, and the evidence of which, produced before the Court which tried some of the miscreants, made Ex-President JOHNSON throw up his case in disgust. But the Kuklux themselves—but only among themselves—say plainly that their present inactivity is enforced, and that when a propitious time arrives, they will recommence the work of flaying the Radicals out of the country. The order has not yet abandoned its first object, entertained from its foundation, which is to secure the electoral votes of the late slave States for the Democratic candidate for President of the United States, hoping that when these votes are secured the Democracy can easily regain control of the nation. This being accomplished, they expect the restoration of the Constitution and the Union as they were, slavery and all, with the South more powerful than before the war. The chiefs of the Order have too much sense to entertain such dreams, or too much prudence to give them expression in words, but such talk as this has been heard during the past few weeks in numerous "dens," as the conclaves of the Klan are now called among the rank and file whose hopes of the long expected "good time coming," have, of late, been greatly strengthened by the supposed disintegration of the Republican Party as a consequence of the Cincinnati movement. The least sanguine of these savages expect that the Republican Party will be so weakened by these dissensions that the Kuklux law will be repealed, and they be once more free to murder and maim Radicals without molestation from the United States Government. These statements are not the coinage of the writer, but are the gist of conversations had with men who listened to them in the very "dens" of the Order. These witnesses declare that the Klan does not, as a general thing, expect to overthrow the Government by force, but only hope to obtain possession of it by intimidation and those frauds upon the ballot-box which they have learned from their Tammany allies in the North. At the same time there are among them some bold spirits who demonstrate to their own satisfaction, and that of their hearers, how easy it would be for the Klan to seize the Government even by force. We are all sworn, say these reasoners, to obey all orders of the Grand Cyclops without question or hesitation. Now, suppose 50,000 of us should get orders to go singly to Washington, each armed with a pistol and knife; being all there, suppose we should be ordered to do certain things at a certain signal, what could prevent us seizing "the city thing?" The absurdity of these dreams is not apparent to any of the Klan, and the mere fact that they are entertained even by a few of the bolder and more desperate spirits is of sufficient significance.

It is entirely too late to deny that the Kuklux Klan is not an organization extending over the States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Florida and Texas, or that its objects are not political. Nothing was ever more clearly proved, even by the most rigid interpretation of the rules of evidence, than these two facts. Variously known as the Constitutional Union Guards, the Union and Young Men's Democracy, the White Brotherhood, the Knights of the White Camelia, the Order of Invisible Empire, and Kuklux Klan, the oaths, rituals, disguises, grips, signs, and passwords of these several organizations are almost identical, and in all of them, with the exception of the second named, the officers are known as Commander, South Commander, Grand Commander, Chief of Dominion, and Grand Cyclops. The detectives sent into the South by the Government, acting through Col. H. G. WARRING, Chief of the Secret Service, have established these facts beyond all cavil, and it is only necessary, in order to show the second fact, to quote a portion of the oath of the Supreme Degree of the Order, which reads as follows:

"I swear to forever oppose the social and political elevation of the negro to an equality with the whites, and that I will come as every hour of the moon to execute the trust confided to me by the Commander and the brethren. I furthermore swear that, in case of my being interrupted in the establishment of the principles for which we are contending, that I will regard no oath that will convict one of the members of this Order, but under all circumstances will stand by the Order in blood and death. I furthermore swear that I will give the signal cry of distress, only when in real distress, and that I will yield my life, if necessary, in aid of a brother giving the double cry of this degree. Lastly, I swear by this Bible, and this skull, and this blood, that should I ever move unfaithful in any particular to the obligation I have now assumed, I long to meet with the just and just penalty of the traitor, which is death, DEATH, DEATH, at the hands of the brethren. So help me God."

Evidence to the same facts was obtained by the Congressional Kuklux Committee in such volumes as to be almost worthless, as it was so bulky when printed that no one would read it.

There has been no attempt in this article to give a rehash of any of the testimony submitted to Congress, as the only design has been to give the public some idea of the present condition of the Kuklux Klan, and the oath derived from witnesses, who, within the past ten days have been within the dens of the Kuklux, as well as observers of their public proceedings. Their testimony is conclusive that even now, in the crippled days of the Kuklux, there is urgent need for the legislation so emasculated in the revision of the Civil Rights Bill, from which the creed of the Cincinnati malcontents is to be drawn. Even yet it is evident that the "return to the methods of peace" by the repeal of the Kuklux law demanded by the "Liberals" would be instantly followed by an outbreak of that savagery in the South which, while the present repressed by that law alone. The Kuklux themselves say as much, and they can be relied upon to speak the truth of themselves in this respect if in no other. If there is any value whatever in evidence, it is the cause of humanity, not of a party, nor even of a Government, which is upheld in the South by that Kuklux law, which a Republican Congress passed and a Republican Administration has enforced with such excellent results.

CUBA.

Progress of the Struggle—Tidings from all Parts of the Island—Miscellaneous Gossip.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, March 30, 1872.

At no time since the beginning of the war have we been less provided with reliable news than at present. News abounds, but each faction gives such widely-differing accounts from the other, that it is impossible to form even ordinary conjectures. Gen. VALMASEDA is still at Canto del Embarcadero. The activity of the troops since his arrival there is truly wonderful and the Cubans have withdrawn from many points which they occupied until now, and have retired to the mountains. The telegraph is playing a most important rôle, and the benefits of its re-establishment in many parts of the revolted districts cannot be overestimated. VALMASEDA still thinks that he can finish the revolution by May, but the time is very short, and I doubt whether he can do it, although he will do much toward its decrease. The Cabans report continual battles and victories over the Spaniards, and only need arms and ammunition to make a more successful resistance. How far these reports are true it is hard to tell, and it is doubtful whether any engagements of magnitude have taken place, the small number of combatants which either side can bring into action at any one time, preventing engagements on a large scale. The heaviest Spanish column does not number over 1,500 men, and the generality only numbers from 200 to 700, while the Cubans have no army corps composed of more than 500 men. The only engagements of consequence occur in the Eastern Department, where the Cubans under MO NESTO DIAZ claim to have given the Spanish Gen. CAMPOS a good thrashing. As Gen. CAMPOS has been very reticent of late, it is likely that he has met with some reverses, but not of such a character as reported among the Cubans here. CAMPOS is a brave soldier and an intelligent one, but he is considered somewhat excitable and not over cautious. A correspondent from Santiago de Cuba says most affairs thereabouts and in Guantanamo continue unchanged, while but little occurs at Manzanillo. He considers VALMASEDA's chances of completely squashing the insurrection in April exceedingly slim. Letters received from those who are with VALMASEDA place the matter in a much more favorable light, however, and VALMASEDA himself is sanguine of success....In the Central and Cinco Villas Departments but little fighting is going on, Gen. PORTILLA's system of occupying the country preventing operations on a small scale from being carried on with much chance of success. Of course, if the Cubans should feel inclined to rise en masse, (a very doubtful contingency,) this system would be of small use....Up to date, Gen. CARLOS GARCIA has not been able to do anything, and he sleeps almost every night in a different place. Hundreds of Cubans hide and protect him, warning him of the approach of the troops and volunteers, although they run great risk in doing so. One man, who had hidden him, was found out, and as happens frequently here in such cases, the gendarmes, in charge of the prison, shot him on the road in order to save him a trial....The résumé of the past fortnight, as published by the War Department, shows 133 Cubans killed and 41 prisoners taken, and 524 presentados, while the Spanish loss is given as 5 killed and 41 wounded. This report, as usual, includes only those who were killed by bullets, and fails to mention the large number of deaths by cholera, small-pox and fevers.... A combined movement of the troops of Las Tunas, Manzanillo, Holguin, and Canto Arriba against VICENTE GARCIA is now spoken of, but GARCIA will undoubtedly be able to give it the slip. A report has also been current, since yesterday, that the Cubans in the Central Department had defeated a Spanish detachment, and were then laying siege to Cascorro.

MISCELLANEOUS GOSSIP.

GEN. PALANCA, late Commander-in-Chief of the Eastern Department, and Gen. ANTONIO VENERO, of the artillery, left for Spain, yesterday....The frigates Arapiles and Gerona have gone to Caracas, to investigate the quarrel between the Venezuelans and the Spanish Minister, and may fasten a row on the Venezuelans, perhaps bombarding Caracas and some other towns....Bishop WHIPPLE, of Minnesota, is here again, to look after the interests of the Church, and see what progress has been made by Rev. Mr. KENNEY, since the latter's arrival.... A race took place, yesterday afternoon, between the first cutters of the flag-ship Worcester and monitor Terror, the former winning handsomely.... The bark Ella, from New-York last week, brought the latest news from that City, in the age of steam....The drouth is very great in Santiago de Cuba, and the people are fighting for the water at the public wells.

QUASIMODO.

Opening of the Wallkill Valley Railroad Bridge.

ROSENDALE, April 7.—The crossing of the first train over the Wallkill Valley Railway Bridge was celebrated at Rosendale yesterday. About 2,000 people were present, including many prominent men from various points in the vicinity. The first train ever constructed of an engine, tender and seven cars. The test was completely satisfactory, the bridge showing no sign of weakness or yielding.

The bridge was begun in August, 1870, and was completed last January. It is built of iron in five spans, supported by heavy stone piers and abutments, and iron columns. It is 150 feet high, being the highest span bridge in the United States, and its total length is 968 feet. It cost $225,000.

The Wallkill Valley Railway is now completed to that point, and the track is ready for the rails to this city. The road is expected to be finished to this place in about two months.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

The Two Cincinnati Conventions—The Tax Bill Still Unsettled—Missouri Safe for the Union—The Colored Vote.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—There is considerable confusion in the public mind over the fact that two Conventions are going to meet at Cincinnati on May 1. The one known as the "Sore-head Republican, or Office-seekers' Convention," is understood; but what the Reunion Reform Mass Convention means is not so clear to many. The fact is, that this last concern is a Democratic possumite gathering, which is to furnish the numbers and make the sentiment for the screamers. The managers of the arrangement are all Democratic, the leaders being MILTON SAYLER, who ran against Hon. AARON F. PERRY for Congress in 1870, and J. H. FOLLETT, who was formerly Democratic Speaker of the Ohio Assembly.

THE TAX BILL.

The Ways and Means Committee were yesterday engaged upon the text of their bill, and entertain the hope of being able to report it to the House by Wednesday. Much interest has been manifested to know whether the Committee would regard their previous action on tea and coffee in making up their bill. It is now understood that they will disregard it entirely, and present their bill in accordance with their own sentiments on these articles, which are in favor of reductions, and against absolute removal of all duty. In reporting the Free Tea and Coffee bill to the House some time since, they compiled with the emphatic instructions of the House; having done this they now feel at liberty to pursue their own views, and the bill to be reported will probably place the rates on tea and coffee at about what they were in Mr. SHERMAN's bill. It is easy to foresee that this may lead to serious embarrassment at the very outset from either one of two causes, viz.: The Senate may take up and pass, at any moment, the Free Tea and Coffee bill now on its calendar, or when the House bill is reported, the same vote as before may put these articles on the free list. In either case, such action will thoroughly disarrange the basis on which the Ways and Means are preparing their bill, and will either necessitate a recommittal or a change of base in the face of perhaps an opposition House, which will be a difficult thing.

SUMNER'S HOME FOR GRANT.

Ward Six of Boston, in which Mr. SUMNER was born, and where he has always lived, and which has been one extreme Democratic aristocratic precincts of Boston-street, and on the other, three or four hundred colored voters, elected its delegates to the Republican State Convention, on Thursday night, and unanimously instructed them for GRANT.

MISSOURI FOR THE UNION.

Ex-Gov. FLETCHER, of Missouri, arrived here from St. Louis last night. He reports the Republican prospects in that State as constantly improving, and that, with sagacious and vigorous management, the State may be triumphantly reclaimed in the Presidential election.

THE COLORED VOTE.

FREDERICK DOUGLASS will be a delegate from this district to the National Convention of Colored Men, which meets at New-Orleans, the 10th of the present month, and will probably be the President of the Convention. Efforts have been making by the runners of the Cincinnati office-seekers' Convention to influence the action of this Convention of the colored men on the supposition that the colored Conclave, if not deflected from GRANT, but judging from the small influence of the particular colored men said to have been approached, they have little chance of success.

THE KUKLUX CASES.

It is understood that one of the South Carolina Kuklux cases, involving the constitutionality of that law, will be so arranged on the docket of the Supreme Court as to come up for argument on the 15th inst.

FISHERY DUES.

The facts in regard to the dues paid by American vessels frequenting the British coast, for the support of light-houses and beacons, may be made the subject of legislation. A revision of these dues was attempted while DANIEL WEBSTER was Secretary of State, but without success. These dues are kept up by several conventions which negotiate the dues. The United States maintains light-houses and buoys on its coast for the whole world, and that without charge, and it therefore seems rather unfair that our commerce should pay tribute to Great Britain in this respect.

REOPENING NAVIGATION.

Ice on Lake St. Clair Breaking Up—Buffalo River Opening.

DETROIT, Mich, April 7.—A tug succeeded in getting through Lake St. Clair yesterday, passing through six miles of ice. The heavy rain prevailing here since yesterday will undoubtedly rot the ice, so that navigation may now be considered open from Fort Huron to Cleveland. The ice in Saginaw Bay and Lake Huron is still solid.

The Buffalo River opened Sunday morning. The tug Compromise, at Buffalo, cut through the ice from Union Dry Dock to the light-house, and returned.

DANA'S DEFEAT.

He and His Attorney Withdraw From the Naval Investigation.

His Promise to Produce Witnesses Unfulfilled—Legality of the Payments of the Secor Claims Clearly Shown.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The disaster, defeat and flight from the city of DANA, BARTLETT, GIBSON et al. has been the principal subject of comment for the past thirty-six hours. It is the unanimous expression that there never was such an overwhelming, humiliating and disgraceful overthrow of the vile purposes of bad men. The last escape of DANA and his scribbler on Friday night was that they would privately furnish to the Committee on Saturday a list of witnesses who, they said, could be summoned to prove the charges made. Nobody believed this could be done, and it was not. DANA and his backers fled the city, at noon of yesterday, without notice to the Committee, and the investigation went on last night in the examination of six witnesses who were concerned in the very matters which the charges pretended to cover. The evidence of Dr. BROADHEAD, Second Controller of the Treasury, the law officer whose fiat is higher than that of Secretary or President on the legality of the payment of the SECOR claim, was conclusive. He passed the claim because it was strictly in accordance with law. Every man who is concerned in any of the transactions covered by the charges will be summoned, and the investigation will not suffer for want of a prosecution. It will be pushed through to a conclusion vigorously.

THE TESTIMONY.

The House Select Committee on the naval investigation met at 7½ P. M., present Messrs. SANDERS, acting Chairman, PETERS, WARNER, and ARCHER. The acting Chairman called upon Mr. ROBESON to proceed with his evidence. Mr. ROBESON inquired whether the list of names of witnesses promised by Mr. DANA had been furnished to the Committee?

The acting Chairman replied that no such list had been furnished to the Committee, and the other members of the Committee concurred in this statement.

Rear Admiral BOGGS was then examined, and testified that during the war he was engaged, under Admiral GREGORY, in superintending the construction of iron-clads at New-York, and saw them every day. He was a senior officer of the Board appointed in 1869 to examine the SECORS' claims for extra work upon the Manhattan, Mahopac and Tecumseh, and the Board decided they were fair and just claims, as the iron-clads were built under a contract that had led to her damages by the necessities of the service, which changes involved a great deal of extra work and additional material. The SECORS were allowed $500 a day extra for every day gained on the contract time, a peculiar arrangement, as the SECORS had more work to do than other contractors. The Board was satisfied that the work charged for had been done. All the extras to contract had been also allowed in the case of MILES GREENWOOD under the authority of a Board composed of Admiral GREGORY and Chief Engineers WOOD and WILLIAMSON, under Mr. WELLES' administration, as witness believed; had seen an order to Admiral GREGORY, how to treat these cases. The original order was put in evidence as follows:

Copy sent General Inspector on 15th March, with order to comply. F. H. G.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION, March 7, 1869.

SIR: Mr. GUSTAVUS SCHOR is in behalf of ALEXANDER SWIFT & Co. of the Niles Works, in a letter to the Department of the Third District, has requested that an advance payment may be made on account of contract for the Canonicus and Saugus, calculating from his own records, and not from the amount claimed by the parties respectively.

(Signed) F. H. GREGORY, Rear Admiral.

By Mr. ROBESON: Q.—I find in looking at that bill that there are two items on ships for rise in the price of materials, and these increased the cost for that reason; what do you say about that? A.—If I recollect the examination we made on that point, it showed that it was after this order had been given to stop work in consequence of the news they got from the South arrived.

Q.—But the point to which I wish to direct your attention specifically is whether that allowance had anything to do with the work on the contract, or whether it was confined merely to the extra work? A.—No, Sir; he had to buy his iron for this extra work after he got the orders, drawings and plans to make it.

Q.—Then the increase in price was entirely on the extra work? A.—Entirely.

Q.—Then in that you have no reference to anything done under the contract specifically? A.—No, Sir; we kept very carefully, and everything done under the contract we took proper account of and threw it out.

To Mr. ARCHER.—Witness was chief of the Board spoken of. There was a previous board known as the Merchant Board. None of the allowances made by the latter board were in dispute. Admiral SCHOR's bill was before witness' board.

Q.—One of the allowances that you made was for increased cost of boilers on account of delays by changes made, the price of labor having advanced; three thousand days at fifty cents a day; what evidence had you before your board as to the number of days? A.—I cannot say positively, except that to my personal knowledge it was necessary after they raised the decks of this vessel, these boilers being completed, to take down the front of the vessel—to take it all out again.

Q.—Did you or any of your officers keep an account of the number of days which they worked? A.—I did not.

Q.—Was there sworn evidence before you of the number of days work? A.—There was evidence; but I do not think it was sworn to.

Q.—Was the extra work done on these vessels the same on both? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—When you were acting on this Board in 1869, did you take into consideration the act of 1866, which awarded to SECOR, and SECOR, PERINE & Co., $115,000? A. We saw that law and read it over, and the conclusion the Board came to was, that the law did not appear to us to apply to that case; but as we were not lawyers we thought we would leave that for some better judge than us to decide.

Q.—This extra work that was done on the vessels that are spoken of was each part of the extra work contracted for separately? A.—No, Sir; you could not contract for such work.

Q.—They had been paid for that extra work in part before, had they not? A.—No, nothing at all, so far as I am aware, until they came before our Board.

Q.—In what way, then, did you arrive at this fifty cents a day that is charged? A.—It was the same amount that had been allowed by the Board composed of Admiral GREGORY, Mr. WOOD and Mr. WILLIAMSON; they had to buy materials after prices had increased, the delay being caused by waiting for the plans, and no contract could be made before hand; extra labor had to be allowed for, as the Government had ordered night work; it necessary for speed; there were also claims for detention; there was nothing said in SECOR's contract about paying for patent rights, so is usually the case; that was why the Board allowed them $2,000.

To Mr. WARNER.—The extra work was passed before the Merchant Board awards.

To Mr. PETERS.—The Merchant Board passed upon matters extra in the contract only.

Q.—SECOR, PERINE & Co. received from the Government $230,000 as extra allowances; $115,000 was by Congress, $60,000 was by your Board. Now, where did they get the balance of their extra allowance? A.—I don't know, Sir.

Q.—Was there any Board, under Mr. WELLES' administration? A.—I do not know, Sir; I know that Admiral GREGORY's Board was abolished; but as I was not a member of the Board, I did not learn anything more than the fact that they were sitting, and were engaged on the claims on account of the vessels.

By the Secretary of the Navy.—In speaking of what evidence you had in regard to the extra prices of fifty cents per day paid for extra work done on these vessels, state whether the same allowance was made for the same description of work on the Typpecanoe? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Then extra work was done on the same precisely as was allowed on the Typpecanoe? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you find by an actual examination of the bill paid for the Typpecanoe that that amount had been allowed on that ship? A.—Yes, that the same amount had been allowed; SECOR's first bill was a great deal larger than the bill which was allowed; they withdrew it, and presented another bill, cutting down the amount to correspond exactly with what had been allowed on GREENWOOD's bill, and that amount was allowed by our Board.

Q.—Mr. ARCHER asked you whether these items were contracted for specifically, and you said that there was no contract about it at all; state whether each item of the extra work was ordered specifically. A.—Each item was ordered specifically by the engineer under authority of Admiral GREGORY, and Admiral GREGORY had charge as General Superintendent of all the work done on ships outside of the Navy-yards.

Chief Engineer LOSING, who was one of the Dogrs Board, was examined by Secretary ROBESON, and testified that the same work was done by the SECORS as on the Typpecanoe; the bill in the case of the Typpecanoe was sent to the Board for signature by the extras which were not in the bill previously paid to the SECORS; all the work was extra to the contract.

By Mr. ARCHER.—Did not know whether any of the bills presented by the SECORS were marked "rejected" by the former Board or not. The Board examined a particular bill to see whether any of the items could be found on the bills which had been paid; the member of the Secor Company who appeared before the Board was not sworn as to his account; the Board took no declaration other than those of the officers who composed it.

Chief-Engineer KING, Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering, was examined by Secretary ROBESON. He testified, among other things, that the Board was authorized by Congress, under the direction of Secretary WELLES; the Board considered how much work was due to contractors under their contract proper; the claims of the SECORS were ruled out as not coming within the law; witness went to Europe on his own motion; he had some difficulty in obtaining leave of absence, the Secretary of the Navy saying he did not wish him to be absent from the bureau.

Mr. ARCHER remarked it appeared from the report of the Marchand Board that $121,196 had been paid to the SECORS for work over and above their contract prices.

Witness said he presumed that statement to be correct.

JOHN M. BRODHEAD, Second Comptroller of the Treasury, testified he has control of the accounts relating in the War and Navy Departments and the Pension and Indian Bureaus; he was the officer having the ultimate decision of the accounts; when the vouchers came to him for the payment of $60,000 to the SECORS, his impression was that the allowances were made. He took them up to the Secretary of the Navy, with whom he had an interview, and called his attention to the law of 1866. He and witness went over the law together, and both came to the conclusion that the acts of 1857 and 1866 were completely in pari materia, and must be construed with regard to each other, and that the award made by the Board designated acted only on the claims that could not be allowed by the Department outside of the contract, being in the nature of damages. The witness became satisfied with the view taken by the Secretary, and had no doubt of its correctness since. The law of 1866 said the $115,000 should be in full discharge of all claims against the United States on account of those vessels upon which the Board made the allowance as their report under the act of March 2, 1867. There was no need of intervention of Congress, as there was a large balance due the SECORS. Witness was entirely satisfied and passed the vouchers. It was not unusual to reopen accounts; it was sometimes done if it was supposed the claims were just.

ALEXANDER W. RUSSELL, Pay Inspector and Naval Pay-master at Philadelphia, testified that the Secretary of the Navy never said a word to him about business until here to-night, nor did he hold any business communication with him except in an official way. The witness gave an account of obtaining supplies, never departing from the rule of giving a contract, when bids are made, to the lowest bidder; goods are obtained from merchants without, to his knowledge, the intervention of middle-men; he always applied for authority to advertise for proposals when the amount of merchandise required was over $1,000, and no authority was given except in urgent cases; he applied for authority to advertise for 1,000 tons of coal for the Tennessee just before she went to Panama Bay; but he purchased the coal without advertising, having been ordered to do so without delay; he never had any direction from the Secretary of the Navy to favor anybody, but he received a letter from the Secretary as follows:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, May 16, 1871.

DEAR SIR: Mr. WILLIAM DUREAN, of the firm of BROMMAKER & INGHAM, dealers in coal, City of Philadelphia, is the son of a personal friend of my own, and is known to me as a gentleman of character and responsibility. I shall be glad if his firm can have a fair opportunity to supply coal when the same is required to be purchased for the use of the navy, subject, of course, to the provisions of the law on that subject and to the best interests of the country.

Very respectfully,
GEORGE M. ROBESON, Secretary of the Navy.
ALEXANDER W. RUSSELL, Purchasing Pay-master, Philadelphia, Penn.

There are no middle-men who make purchases for the Navy Department in Philadelphia; there never was an order given to witness to purchase coal from either of the CATTELLS, or that they should buy coal for him; he had purchased flour from A. G. CATTELL & Co., flour and commission merchants, at various times to send on board of ships going to sea or baking bread in the navy-yard; the whole amount of purchases being $2,138 38 to date; witness never employed anybody to buy coal for him; as to the letter of Secretary ROBESON to him about BROMMAKER and INGHAM, the witness said they never sold him any coal; they sent in a bid, but their bid was too low enough.

Mr. ARCHER asked whether he had ever been approached directly or indirectly by the CATTELLS or by their friends to give them contracts, to which question witness replied he had never been thus approached.

The Committee adjourned at 10½ o'clock until Monday evening.

THE INTERNATIONALE.

Text of the New French Law of Prescription.

The Journal Officiel publishes the text of the law recently adopted by the National Assembly, proscribing the Internationale in France. It runs as follows: "Article 1. Every international association which, under whatsoever denomination, and particularly under that of the International Association of Workmen, shall have for its object the incitement to a suspension of labor, to the abolition of the right of property, of the family, of the country, of religion, or of the freedom of worship, will constitute by the sole fact of its existence and of its ramifications through the French territory an attempt against the public peace. Article 2. Every Frenchman who, after the promulgation of the present law, shall become affiliated or shall perform any act of affiliation to the International Association of Workmen, or to any other association professing similar doctrines and having the same object, shall be punished by imprisonment for a period of not less than three months or more than two years, and by a fine of 50 to 1,000 francs. He may, in addition, be deprived of all his civic, civil and family rights enumerated in article 42 of the Penal Code, during five years at least or ten years at most. Any foreigner who shall affiliate himself in France, or shall perform any act of affiliation, will be subject to the penalties prescribed by the preceding Article 3. The penalty of imprisonment may be extended to five years, and that of fine to 2,000 francs in the case of those, whether Frenchmen or foreigners, who shall have accepted any office in any such association, or who shall knowingly have allowed their place of reunion, whether by receiving or inviting subscriptions on its behalf, or by procuring adherents either singly or in bodies, or by propagating its doctrines, its rules, or its circulars. They may further be placed by the Correctional Tribunals, after the expiration of these penalties, under the surveillance of the police for from five to ten years. Any Frenchman or foreigner whom the provision last recited shall have been enforced will, during the same period, remain subject to the measures of police applicable to foreigners in conformity with articles 7 and 8 of the law of Dec. 8, 1849. Articles 4. Those shall be liable to punishment by imprisonment for from six months to a year, and to fine of from 25 francs to 500 francs, who shall knowingly have hired or let any building for one or several meetings of a portion or section whatever of the above-mentioned Association, the same being without prejudice to the heavier penalties applicable under the penal code to crimes and offenses of any kind of which they may have been guilty, either as principals or accomplices. Article 5. The article 463 of the penal code may be applied in respect of the penalties of imprisonment and of fine prescribed by the preceding sections. Article 6. The provisions of the penal code and all previous laws which are not modified by the present law shall continue in force."

German Festivities and Celebrations.

The members of Post Koltzer, No. 12, of the Grand Army of the Union, had an entertainment at the Walhalla, in Orchard-street, consisting of tableaux, musical and dramatic exercises, in which the German Veteran Vocal Society assisted. The proceeds will be devoted to the benefit of the Union Home and School for Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans.

The German Landwehr Verein, an association of German members of the Prussian militia, yesterday made an arrangement to celebrate its first anniversary and the German peace jubilee at the Turn Hall, on Wednesday. A committee was formed composed of Messrs. OTTO FALK, JOHN KIEBERS, JOHN LEILMAN, and BERNO SPEYER.

The Society of German Patriots of the Revolution of 1848-49 met at Concordia Hall yesterday, to make arrangements for an anniversary celebration and a Committee of Arrangements was appointed for that purpose.

The Feet Committee for the celebration of the 16th of April, on Wednesday, the anniversary of last year's peace jubilee, has issued a call upon the Germans to decorate and illuminate their houses. The principal features will be at Germania Assembly Rooms, in which the civil and militia organizations will participate. There will be a banquet, addresses, a vocal and musical entertainment, &c., the proceeds of which will be for the benefit of the German Hospital fund.

ARKANSAS.

The State Central Republican Committee—Convention to be Held May 22.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—A private telegram received from Little Rock, Ark., dated yesterday, says four members withdrew from the State Central Republican Committee, whereon the remainder filled the vacant places, and the Committee thus constituted designated May 22 as the time for holding the State Convention. Another private telegram gives a different version, stating that on account of the Chairman refusing to recognize four members of the Committee, the Committee, by a vote of 6 against 3, adjourned to another place, not wishing to have any difficulty at the house of the Chairman where the meeting was held. The probability is there will be two State Conventions.

THE DESERET CONSTITUTION.

Some of the Declarations of the Instrument.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 7.—The Utah State Constitution, recently referred to the Committee on Territories, has been printed. It declares that such terms, if any, as may be prescribed by Congress as a condition for the admission of the State of Deseret into the Union, shall be subject to ratification by a majority of the people. This Constitution guarantees the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, but the liberty of conscience secured is not to be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness or other crimes, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of the State. It also contains a clause defining treason against the State.

THE WEATHER.

Synopsis and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, April 8—1 A. M.—The barometer has continued highest over the New-England coast. The area of rain has extended north-eastward over the Lake region and eastward to the Atlantic, and partially cloudy weather continues over the former and South Atlantic and Gulf States. Clear and pleasant weather has prevailed during Sunday over the interior of the Southern States and northward to Iowa, Illinois, Ohio and Virginia. Reports have not yet been received from the stations west of the Missouri.

PROBABILITIES.

Partially cloudy, but pleasant, weather, will prevail over the Middle and South Atlantic States by Monday morning, and extend over New-England during Monday. Increased cloudiness, with easterly to southerly winds, is probable from the upper lakes to the South Atlantic and Gulf coasts, and during Monday weather and rain will probably prevail throughout the Mississippi valley. Dangerous winds are not anticipated.

SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT.

It has been snowing at Cheyenne, Denver and Virginia City. Rain is reported from Baltimore, Cincinnati, Grand Haven, Indianapolis, Keokuk, Lake City, Pa., Louisville, Norfolk, Va., Augusta, Cape May, Detroit, Mobile, New-York, Philadelphia, St. Paul, Boston, Buffalo, Burlington, Duluth, New-London, Oswego, Pittsburg, Portland, Rochester, Savannah, Toronto, and fell in this city last night and this morning. Cloudy weather, with a high south-westerly wind, and a temperature of 20° above zero, is reported this evening from Mount Washington.

Murder by an Ex-Clergyman—He Shoots a Negro and is Held to Bail.

LOUISVILLE, April 7.—Last Tuesday JAS. TEMPLE, a farmer in McCracken County, formerly rector of the Episcopal Church, shot a negro named JOHN SMITH, aged twenty years, putting thirteen buckshot in his back. The negro ran about 100 yards, and fell, when TEMPLE went up to him, put the muzzle of the gun to his head, and, discharging the other barrel, blew his brains out. TEMPLE was arrested and tried at Paducah Friday and Saturday. The evidence showed that Smith had been employed in TEMPLE's house, and while kindling fires in his daughter's rooms took occasion to use insulting language to them, and afterward boasted of having had criminal connection with them. This told on TEMPLE, who is nearly deaf, and has a very nervous, excitable temperament. Coming suddenly upon SMITH, TEMPLE shot him. He was held in $5,000 bail to answer at the Criminal Court.

Supposed Murder—A Woman's Body Found with Traces of Strangulation.

ERIE, Penn., April 7.—A woman named GRACE PLUCKER, about forty years of age, was found dead in bed in a little shanty near Land Light-house, today. Her face was black from apparent strangulation, and there are marks like finger-points on her throat. The only occupants of the shanty were her husband and little son. The husband has been taken into custody to await a coroner's inquest.

OUTRAGES BY MEXICANS.

Insecurity of Life and Property Upon the Texas Frontier—Report of the Grand Jury to the United States Court.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, EASTERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS.

To Hon. Amos Morrill, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Texas:

The Grand Jurors of the United States, in their final presentment to your honorable Court at the close of their session, respectfully present: In approaching the matter of the depredatory war which has been waged against the defenceless citizens of the United States, and residents of the valleys of the Rio Grande, the Nueces, the Rio Frio, and their tributaries, there is hesitancy, because the short limits of a presentment will not give an adequate idea of the extent of the hostile operations, the number of valuable lives lost, and the aggravated character and the enormity of the excesses which organized bands of men, fitted out in Mexico, have perpetrated upon the people of Western Texas. The honorable Court is respectfully referred to the accompanying evidence, but at the same time we would request that the same be not filed and made a part of the records of the Court, and be not published, but deposited with the District-Attorney. The motives inducing this request will appear by a perusal of the evidence. A reign of terror is proven to exist between the Rio Grande and the Nueces. Mercenary bands of marauders—Mexican officers and soldiers, and Mexican outlaws and bandits—have been for about seven years holding a saturnalia of crime, violence and rapine upon the soil of Texas. They have denounced the penalty of death against any who become informers. They have already sacrificed life upon mere suspicion, as in the case of young CLEVELAND, of San Antonio, and others. Should our request be unheeded, the lives of witnesses would be taken with certainty, and without remorse.

The evidence submitted justifies the declaration that a depredatory war has existed on this frontier since 1865; that it has been waged by men organized in Mexico, by Mexican soldiers acting under command of a Mexican General, and commanded directly by officers of the Mexican army; that the authorities of Mexico, civil and military, have countenanced, aided and supported these hostile operations; that the robbery of our citizens has been legalized so far as the acts of Mexican officials could legalize murder, robbery, and other criminal outrages; that the archives of Mexico have been used openly, publicly and shamelessly to effect the sale of property robbed from the people of Texas; that Mexican officials, merchants of that and other nationalities, and all classes of Mexicans, have bought and sold cattle, hides, horses, and other property, stolen from the people of Texas, knowing they had no authority to obtain it; the Custom-house and municipal authorities have profited by the piratical acts of the Mexican soldiers and highwaymen, and a tax has been levied upon cattle which they knew had been taken by armed bands from the rightful owners; that the people on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande consider and treat the Americans as enemies; they claim the country between the Nueces and the Rio Grande, and express a determination to drive the Americans from it.

Among the grievances of which this people justly complain, there is none more galling than the sending of Gen. CORTINA to this frontier. It may be truly said that he has written the history of his career on this side of the Rio Grande in letters of blood and fire. The criminal who stands charged upon the oaths of twelve men, good and true men, of murder, theft, and treason—who levied war upon the United States, murdered its citizens and soldiers, and robbed its mails; who laid waste 120 miles of frontier; and who now occupies the double position of ranking officer of the Mexican Army upon the line of the Bravo, and ranking now and horse thief on both frontiers, has been retained on duty against the protest of Gen. McCOOK, which was communicated to President JUAREZ. His retention is a deliberate, willful and studied insult to the Government of the United States, its officers and people. Gen. CORTINA has given his officers and soldiers orders to kill and rob the people of Texas. He has received a large share of the plunder. He has stocked four ranches mostly with cows and horses stolen from Texas. It is believed, from the evidence and from other reliable authority, that since the close of the civil war in that country there has been an average of 5,000 cattle stolen from Texas monthly and driven into Mexico, and this estimate is confined to the lower Rio Grande. The total number is estimated at 120,000, and the actual value at $6,000,000. This does not include losses accruing from the depredations of the Kickapoo Indians, naturalized citizens of Mexico. The loss of life, the sense of insecurity, the decreased value of property, the paralysation of business, and the moral effects resulting from this war cannot be estimated. Some of these defy the sordid imagination of dollars and cents.

The Grand Jurors would respectfully call attention to the assaults which have been made upon officers of the United States Government while in the discharge of their duties; to the threats against them to stop forcible destruction of property, and to the persecutions and prosecutions which have followed them from performing their duty. And all these acts are shown to have been done by raiders, with the approval of Mexican authorities. It is known to the world that United States officers have been killed on the Rio Grande by armed Mexicans, and that employment in a public capacity is regarded by Mexicans, in the way, places it a position of great peril. Inspector DUROUT, killed in Brownsville, and the murder of Inspectors HAMMONS and PHELPS, and the wounding of others at Clarksville, are facts officially recorded; and the fate of Inspector McLAUGHLIN may be attributed to the same hands.

The evidence of all witnesses—irrespective of nationality—is conclusive as to the insecurity of life and property on this frontier. There is no protection to the citizen in the enjoyment of his rights and privileges. His life, his liberty, and whatever a freeman holds dear, are at the mercy of armed bands who can invade his home, insult his family, and violate the proprieties, the decencies, and even the sanctities of private life with impunity. Our fellow citizens of Mexican origin, and of other nationalities, have suffered alike with the native American, because the same fling covers them, and they have no source to look for relief. The people of the country regard Americans, and deem it legitimate to assault and plunder all over which the American Banner floats.

This deplorable state of affairs, this loss of life and property, and the misfortunes which have in a manner crushed this frontier, have resulted from the want of an adequate force of cavalry to convince the inhabitants of the Rio Grande Valley. A mounted force properly handled, which could follow marauders into the fastnesses of the chaparrals, pursue with Parthian vigor and perseverance over the open prairies, could give protection and roll back the tide of outrages and assassinations. The nation is laboring under the incurable disease of chronic revolution, its manners have become demoralized by half a century of war, and internal convulsions and dissensions. The absence of United States troops on the line of the lower Rio Grande in 1859 resulted in the Cortina war, and the absence of a sufficient force to protect this frontier has invited the attacks of a hostile and aggressive neighbors, and the pillage of a territory covering not less than 50,000 square miles, are the fruits of the omission.

The inhabitants of this territory have suffered all the horrors of warfare, and have known the loss of the securities of the masses, and have appealed in vain for protection. They have published authentic statements of the wrongs and the outrages committed upon them by heartless invaders, and no sympathetic response has been returned. They are reduced to the last extremity. The alternative is presented, in the event of Government protection shall not be extended, to abandon their homes to their enemies or to defend them. They feel that the great law of humanity allows them to resort to measures of self-defence, to repel force by force, and to meet their invaders and despoilers as freemen should meet, with manly blades. An your Grand Jurors, though generally not residents of the section in question, acting under the solemn obligations of their oaths, do present, that in their opinion, should these plundered, harassed and wronged people be impelled to strike for vengeance upon the breasts of those who have filled the land with violence and bloodshed, assassination, and a long catalogue of inhumanities, they can appeal before the bar of public opinion and plead such a justification as no people in a modern times have been able to produce during a period of unsullied peace.

Your Grand Jurors have seen with pleasure the joint resolution introduced into Congress by Hon. COX HANCOCK. They would respectfully suggest that the compensation for the troops contemplated would be very proper, but it would drink no relief to the suffering frontier. An effective and sufficient force of cavalry to chastise and expel the armed bands, and to drive from our soil the Mexican troops now using it for marauding purposes upon Mexican territory, as from the Lopeno ranche to Zapata County, and for plundering our people, is imperiously demanded, and at once. Our representatives and Senators in Congress are requested to use their influence in procuring the sending of this force to the Rio Grande. In conclusion, your Grand Jury would call attention to the good understanding which has existed between themselves and the able gentleman presiding over the Honorable Court, the District-Attorney, and all the officers of the court. JOHN S. FORD,

Foreman, Cameron County, Texas.

Unfortunate Predicament of a Poor Debtor.

From the Boston Times, April 6.

A bill to amend the Poor Debtors law, discussed in the House yesterday, shows a singular state of things—almost as bad as the pictures of Hogarth lamentable pieces of confinement. The amending bill was suggested by the case of JOHN DENNIS, now lying in Charles-street Jail a prisoner for debt, and who, unless the Legislature acts on the matter, or a forcible release is made, must remain there for life. He was arrested for debt, but, in an examination as to his power to take the poor debtor's oath, fraud on his part was discovered, and he was sentenced to thirty days in jail. He served out his time and again applied to take the oath, which was administered to him in the jail. Sheriff CLARK declined to release him, the ground that he had forfeited his rights under the law by such imprisonment. The Supreme Court sustained the Sheriff, and the prison gates remained sealed against the poor debtor for life. The amending bill, started on its passage in the House yesterday, will probably set the prisoner at liberty.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

Hoboken Affairs.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

We, of the suffering tax-payers of Hoboken, had almost despaired of seeing our grievances ventilated in your columns, and consequently the generous task you have had in hand for the last few years, we are all the more grateful to you for the space and time you have given our "case" this morning. Every honest and enlightened citizen of our city must admit the truth of the main body of your article. But "were remains behind," and we hope you will not stop at this first step.

In the matter of city printing and advertising we believe we need some investigation and publicity. A RESIDENT.

No Sinecure of the City Hall.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

TAX-payers should protest against any further increase of the present enormous debt of the City, and take measures to oppose the project now before the Legislature, compelling the City to pay one-half of the cost of depressing the railroad tracks on the Fourth-avenue. It would be just as much money taken from the pockets of the tax-payers, to put in the coffers of rich corporate monopolies. It is about time that the people assert their rights, and permit no further robbery of the streets and overcharge on the Fourth-avenue City cars. TAX-PAYER.

NEW-YORK, Friday, April 5.

Mr. Vanderbilt's Nuisance.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I notice your just remarks in today's issue of your paper in relation to unnecessary noise by whistles and bells of Harlem Railroad Company. We have heard of reform in this respect, but yet children within a mile are nightly set to crying by the needless use of bells and long-continued whistling of locomotives after o'clock at night, when freight cars are started.

Mr. VANDERBILT's plan is to secure, without cost, the entire use of streets and all crossings, between Forty-fifth and Forty-ninth streets. This space, worth millions, would be better than a free gift, as there would be no taxes to pay.

Newspapers and Postal Boxes.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I am in the habit of sending the TIMES every day to my brother at the West. Today, seeing a collector taking the contents of the mail-box on the corner of Thirty-fourth-street and Sixth-avenue, I handed him the paper properly stamped, but he refused to receive it, and said I must take it to the station, and I noticed he had sorted out all the papers that had been put in the box, a dozen or more, and had laid them on top and went off and left them there. As all the new boxes are made with large openings to receive papers, it seems to me that I could have that man arrested for robbing the mail, as he deliberately threw out of this mail-box matter that had been intrusted to its keeping and was properly stamped.

Yours truly, J. R.

A Voice from the Past.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

For an old Gothamite to read articles in papers about the coming drouth, is amusing.

Pass the corner of Fourth-street and Lafayette-place, there is an old pump (now out of repair,) which in its day gave ample supply of cold water.

Still, we have the wells all over the City covered with planks, which can soon be used in an emergency.

Oh, how I liked the old pump in front of the hospital in Broadway; no one for too when you drank it.

All we want now is new pumps; then we shall have enough for use in fires and watering streets. Ask old New-Yorkers and they will agree with me in the suggestions to find this remedy in the hour of danger, which now seems to be unknown to the rising generation. SENEX.

A BAG OF GOLD.

A Search for an Owner of Coin That Had Lain in a Merchant's Safe Four Years.

From The Augusta (Ga.) Constitutionalist, April 7.

A few weeks since, Mr. C. B. MARTIN, the book-keeper of Mr. ANTOINE POULLAIN, one of our most prominent cotton factors, called the attention of his employer to a bag of gold which had been in the iron safe in Mr. POULLAIN's office for nearly four years. The bag was not labeled, or marked in any manner, and neither of the gentlemen had any knowledge as to how it had placed it in their charge. Mr. MARTIN, therefore, suggested that it be opened, in order to discover if there was anything inside which would lead to its identification. The suggestion meeting with Mr. POULLAIN's approval, the bag was opened and in it was found a memorandum of an account due from a Mr. GIBBS, of Gainesville, Georgia. This threw no light on the matter, as Mr. POULLAIN was positive that he had never received such a package of gold from Mr. DAVIS. The only parties with whom he recollected having ever had gold transactions were Mr. GRAHAM MOORE and Col. J. N. ANSON—his son-in-law—of Greensboro, Ga. He therefore wrote to Mr. MOORE, stated the fact about the bag of gold, which contained $700 in pieces of various denominations, having been in the safe for several years, and asked if he (Mr. MOORE) had ever deposited a bag containing such an amount with the writer. Mr. MOORE, in answer, said that he had never done so, and for four years ago asked Mr. MARTIN, on a certain evening, to place a bag of gold belonging to him in the safe, but that he was positive he had called for and received it from Mr. MARTIN the next morning. This answer left Messrs. POULLAIN and MARTIN altogether in the dark as to the ownership of the gold. Several days afterward, while Mr. MARTIN was relating the circumstance to a number of gentlemen at the Georgia National Bank, one of them remarked that perhaps the mysterious bag and contents had some connection with a recent arbitration case at Greensboro. This arbitration, he stated, was between Messrs. CHAS. D. DAVIS and JOHN C. MERRITT, of that place, and arose from the following facts: It appears that on the 27th of May, 1868, Mr. MERRITT requested Mr. DAVIS, who was and is one of the principal merchants of Greensboro, to take charge of and deposit in his safe a bag containing $700 in gold. Mr. DAVIS at first refused to receive the gold in his safe, as he did not care to be responsible for its safe keeping. Upon Mr. MERRITT's repeating his request, however, he consented to receive it on condition that that gentleman would take a receipt in which it should be stated that the money was placed there at his (the latter's) risk. Mr. MERRITT agreed to this, and Mr. DAVIS accordingly gave him the following receipt, and placed the gold in the safe:

GREENSBORO, Ga., May 27, 1868.

Received, Greensboro, Ga., May 27, 1868, of John C. MERRITT, on deposit, for his own accommodation, one hundred and ninety-three gold coins, seven hundred and six dollars in gold. CHAS. D. DAVIS.

Last Fall—nearly four years after—Mr. MERRITT called upon Mr. DAVIS for the gold. Search was made in the safe for it, but it could not be found. Mr. DAVIS said that he had no recollection of having ever taken the bag out of the safe, but was utterly unable to account for its disappearance. Mr. MERRITT demanded that either the gold or its equivalent should be paid to him. Mr. DAVIS thereupon read the receipt aloud in the presence of the gentlemen, and stated that he was willing to submit the matter to arbitrators chosen by Mr. MERRITT. Mr. MERRITT accordingly selected five gentlemen as arbitrators, who decided that Mr. DAVIS should pay Mr. MERRITT the amount of the money, which he did some time in last February.

After hearing this statement Mr. MARTIN wrote to Mr. DAVIS in reference to the bag of gold found in Mr. POULLAIN's safe. Mr. DAVIS at once replied that he had no doubt but that it was the same bag that had been placed in his safe by Mr. MERRITT, although he had no idea how it had got out of his possession. He accordingly executed an indemnity bond to Mr. POULLAIN, and the gold was delivered to a firm in this city by his order.

The only supposition in regard to the matter is that Mr. MOORE had deposited the bag of gold with Mr. DAVIS, and upon his calling for it, that Mr. MERRITT's package was delivered to him by mistake. After receiving the bag, Mr. MOORE came on to Augusta, and deposited it in Mr. POULLAIN's safe, from which he was to take it the next morning. It is thought, however, that he returned to Greensboro without retaking the bag of gold, and as he had a reasonable expectation of early after years, that the circumstance certainly escaped his memory. This is only supposition, however.

In connection with this circumstance, our attention was on Saturday called to the fact that some time in January last a negro man, by a negro party, in this city, while two colored representatives of the recent riot in McDuffie County, had brought to Augusta, from that county, one gold and the other $1,000 in gold and sold it for currency. This shows that despite all that has been said and written about the poverty of the South, there still seems enough left to its sons, if it is there to be deployed, however, that it should come to be kept out of circulation instead of being added to the active capital of the country.

SECOND BOARD—P. M.

MONDAY, April 8—P. M.

The imports of the past week were very heavy—over twelve millions in value—and the amount of Foreign Merchandise, upon which Custom Duties were paid into the Treasury, is about nine million of dollars. The Export movement from New-York was not in proportion, being only three and a half millions as compared with five and a half millions for the first week in April last year. The export of Cotton from the Southern ports is also comparatively light in quantity, though the increased value from last Spring makes up a good part of the difference as affecting Exchange. There is no export movement of Gold Coin as yet, but a fair amount of Silver Bullion, received here from the Pacific States and Territories, is going abroad every week.

General Trade is active, and in nearly all articles relating to Metals, both Domestic and English, there is unusual speculation and at buoyant prices. The recent advance is decidedly marked in Copper, Bar Iron, Steel Rails, Iron Rails, Pig Iron, &c.

The activity in Merchandise, added to an unusual speculation on the Stock Exchange, creates a sharp demand for money, at a season when the City Bank movement is showing fifteen millions less Deposits in New-York, and a corresponding decrease in the ability of the Banks as lenders, than this time last year. But as an early return of Currency from the Country is anticipated, the stringency in the market is not felt upon general grade, while extra rates are paid by the Brokers to carry over the Stocks which their customers continue to buy, either for higher prices later in the season or a quick turn for profit, from day to day. The recent wonderful advance, under foreign orders, in Erie Stock has imparted a spirit to the whole list of New-York and Western Roads which no one believed the old Stock capable of a few weeks ago. Now the influence of this revolution in Erie is even more sensibly felt in London and on the Continent upon American Railroad Shares, several of which, not heretofore known to the Exchanges of London or Amsterdam, have been introduced in the last fortnight, while the orders have been doubled for other Stocks previously introduced. All this, of course, reacts in speculation here, besides affecting, for the moment, the Foreign Exchanges to the extent of delaying, unexpectedly, the export demand for American Gold Coin.

On Saturday, the speculation in these Stocks was checked, late in the day, by the unfavorable Bank return, and after a week of more than usual animation, the prices left off with few exceptions—Erie of the number—lower than at the close of the previous week. The Bank return was made more unfavorable than it would otherwise have been by the trickery of the old Erie gang, who, since their recent deposition from the control of the property, have been bearing the Stock market and manipulating the Money market to the full extent of their remaining power for mischief. The use made of their Tenth National Bank to consummate their fraud upon the Greenback receivers in the other banks in the Clearing-house, was plainly shown in the Clearing-house, when at once the bad condition of the Bank was made known to the notice of the National Bureau of Currency at Washington, and to the attention of the Clearing-house Association here. At the request of about a dozen of the leading Bank Officers, a special meeting of the Association was convened on Saturday morning, and one of their number, Mr. TAPPEN, of the Gallatin National, was appointed to co-operate with the National Bank Examiner, Mr. MEIGS, who had been specially instructed by the Secretary of the Treasury to look into the connection of the Bank with this transaction. The report of Mr. TAPPEN will be made to an adjourned meeting of the Clearing-house. The report of Mr MEIGS has, no doubt, already gone to Washington. The facts elicited leave no doubt as to the purpose of the "lock-up," and very little doubt as to the complicity of the Bank, which for all practical purposes is the mere creature of GOULD and his many-years partner, A. N. SMITH, in this gross outrage upon the business public, and this grosser scandal upon the character and comity of the Clearing-house Association.

We do not care to anticipate the action of the Clearing-house, much less to advise what this action should be, for the sufficient reason that technical, not to say legal points, may be interposed, as against the dictates of self-respect and the plain common-sense duty to cut the offending member off at once and without qualification. But we must be pardoned a timely reference to the example of the Stock Exchange, a short time since, in dealing with this same Erie gang, who had obtained control of the Hannibal and St. Joseph Road, and with their Tenth National Bank. The Exchange would not recognize the Bank as a proper Registrar for the Missouri Road any more than the Governing Committee would consent to have GOULD or SMITH set as Registrar in either of their Broker's shops in Broad-street. The mere circumstance that the Bank was then in credit at the Clearing-house, although technically suggested, was not suffered to outweigh the more notorious fact that the Bank is the mere creature of these people. They were forced, therefore, to select another Registrar. Aside from this example, we hear that the Clearing-house gave the Bank to understand on Saturday that it could not hereafter become a heavy debtor to the Association, as it had in the instance of Friday become a heavy creditor. It would not be trusted hereafter to pay up a debtor balance of four or five millions, while its means or ability to pay rest even for a few hours upon such desperate speculators as own and control it. And this, we should think, would end all intercourse at the Clearing-house, as the same considerations have already ended all recognition of the Bank by certain leading members of the Association.

The weekly averages of the Associated Banks, Local and National, reporting through the Clearing-house for the week ending Saturday last, April 6, compare as follows with the previous week, and also with the corresponding week last year. To which we add the Gold and Currency balances in the New-York office of the United States Treasury, at those dates respectively:

The Bank return published this morning exhibits the relative strength of the movement in respect to the lawful Money held, as against the Circulation and Deposits, to which we add the position of the movement the week before, and also of the movement of the corresponding week last year:

The present Bank return is weaker than the previous report. The Banks lose $1,600,000 on the Gold average, while the Treasury takes in $6,000,105 for Gold Customs. The Banks also lose $2,954,300 in Greenbacks, while it is known that over $4,000,000 have been locked up by special arrangement with the Tenth National Bank by certain bearish operators on the Stock Exchange who own this Bank. As the decrease in the general line of deposits (owing to an addition of $1,716,000 to Loans and Discounts) is only $1,003,500, twenty-five ⅌ cent. on which, in Gold and Greenbacks, would be less than half a million of dollars, it follows that the loss of $4,575,100 in Gold and Greenbacks leaves the movement weaker by $4,076,725 than on last Monday.

The import entries at New-York, embracing foreign Dry Goods and General Merchandise, for the week past, were $12,765,852, as against $8,543,409 for the corresponding week last year. The exports of Domestic Produce, other than Gold and Silver, were $3,595,198, against $6,585,810 same week in 1871. The export of Gold and Silver, $916,474, against $846,617 same week in 1871. The Customs in Gold paid into the New-York Office of the United States Treasury for the week were $6,000,105. The receipts of Cotton, coastwise and by rail, 11,869 bales.

LOS ANGELES.

Sentence of the Men Convicted of Participation in the Outrages on the Chinese.

Telegrams from Los Angeles, March 30, to the San Francisco papers, give the following account of the circumstances attending the sentencing of the persons found guilty there of manslaughter upon indictments for murder committed during the riot of October last:

The prisoners were brought into Court in charge of Deputy Sheriff JOHN M. BALDWIN, and locked but little the worse for their confinement in the county jail, which, in the majority of the cases, had been continuous since last October. After motions for new trial and in arrest of judgment had been made by Col. J. G. HOWARD, and overruled by the Court, L. F. CRANSHAW, found guilty of the crime of being accessory to the murder of the Chinese Doctor, GENG TONG, was called up for sentence, and in answer to the question whether he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced, asserted his innocence, declared the wounds the first time he had ever been in Court on a criminal charge, and asked the clemency of the Court on account of his youth. He is apparently about twenty-one years of age. After the usual remarks by the Court, the expression of the probability that had some man had caused his connection with the riot, and the hope entertained by the Court of his reformation, he was sentenced to confinement in the State prison for three years. The case of LUIS MENDELL and others, indicted as accessories to the crime of murder, and found guilty of manslaughter, came next. MENDELL had nothing to say in reply to the question as to his innocence, and was sentenced for six years.

A. R. JOHNSON, who was exceedingly nervous and much excited, made a long reply, during which he called the attention of the Court to a life of industry; asserted his innocence; declared that he had been found guilty as a poor man; that the people were guilty, but that the poor alone suffered. He paid his legal defenders a compliment or two upon the ability with which they had managed his case, and told a badly mixed story of a dream he had, in which he saw the jury as a rose with green leaves attacked by a bee, which took the rose's honey and caused its decay. He said that he felt sorry for the Chinaman, but was innocent himself. He will be examined as insane on Monday next, the conclusion arrived at on motion of his attorneys, after the sentence had been pronounced, sending him to the Penitentiary for six years. CHAS. ALBRIN said that he was forty years of age, and had never before been charged with any crime. He was sentenced for five years. M. McDOUALD declared that he was not present at the riot; knew nothing about it, and that his was a case of mistaken identity; that he was as innocent as a child of the crime for which he had been convicted. Sentenced for seven years. E. ALVARADO said that his conviction was the result of the machinations of his enemies; that he was not at the riot; could prove it, and if the rope was around his neck he could, only declare his innocence. Sentenced for five years. JESUS MARTINEZ, aged about twenty-two years, said nothing in answer to the question. He was sentenced for four years. REFUGIO BOTELLO, after asserting his innocence, gave an account of his whereabouts and conduct on the night of the riot; stated that of his own knowledge he did not know that a single Chinaman had been killed; that he assisted Sheriff Burns at his request, and was forced to remain under arrest in the Coroner's House, and, aided by others, took him to jail without injury to his person or property, and that the Chinaman's purse was found in the Chinaman's pocket at the jail and placed in the jail safe, as is customary. Sentenced for two years. Defendant's attorneys asked time to file motion for new trial, which was granted twelve days in all the cases except BOTELLO's, and that he be admitted to bail until the decision of the Supreme Court. The appeal was let open until Monday.

EX-GOV. ANDREW.

The Proposed Monument to His Memory—Address to the Massachusetts Volunteers.

The Executive Committee of the John A. Andrew Monument Association have issued an appeal for contributions to the soldiers of Massachusetts who served in the late war. They say:

SOLDIERS OF MASSACHUSETTS: A little flag, planted by some tender hand in the grave-yard at Hingham, is all that marks the burial-place of that loyal Governor who covered the State with a mantle of glory. It is well that, until now, he should have slept in the stillness of nature which he loved, without a sound of the hammer or the chisel to disturb his tranquil repose. But his family have now yielded his preferences to our earnest wishes, that are the regiments which knew and loved him shall pass away they may be permitted to erect a memorial tablet that shall point our to strangers and the forgetful world the secluded grave of one of their most faithful and most beloved citizens. Soldiers! to you this duty is committed! By you, survivors of the regiments which he served for battle with clarion words from the depth of his own brave, hopeful heart; by you, whose return as victors he welcomed with soldiers' pride, his remains will be cared for "tenderly." From you he never met distrust nor coldness. For us, and with us, he gave his life. The navy, ever ready to join us in kindness, as they have been foremost in peril, offer their co-operation to make this memorial a tribute from all the soldiers and sailors of Massachusetts who served in the war of the great rebellion.

DAILY, WEEKLY AND SEMI-WEEKLY.

This journal is now thoroughly identified with the greatest political necessity of the hour—uncompromising warfare against all forms of corruption, whether in national or local government. For years past the TIMES has been exposing the demoralizing schemes of self-interested politicians, and its recent warfare upon the Tammany Democrats has been received with universal approval. It has adhered to the pledge given in its original prospectus, more than twenty years ago, that the public should be truly represented, and their interests faithfully guarded through its columns. Its record has been pure and honorable, and the highest aim of its proprietors is to render it more and more worthy of its past history, and of the confidence which the public repose in it. Two out of three of the original proprietors still direct its policy, and guide it on all public questions. They purpose that the TIMES shall continue to keep clear of all narrow and unworthy influences and cliques, and aim to represent the great body of the public, as distinguished from personal factions. It occupies a perfectly independent position, and is free to speak the truth on all subjects and about all men. Its greatly increased circulation throughout the country adds to its power and influence. It will continue to be a faithful exponent of Republican principles, and advocate with untiring energy every cause which tends to further the welfare of the people.

A very full summary of news, and many general articles of great interest, are published in the Semi-weekly editions; and in the Weekly edition there is an unabridged report of the proceedings at the Farmers' Club, an excellent summary of political information, and a great variety of matter suitable for family reading.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is pre-eminently a family paper, all objectionable advertisements being rigidly excluded; and it has a constantly increasing circulation among the most respectable classes of the community.

Notice.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot under any circumstances return rejected communications, nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

To Advertisers.

☞ For the accommodation of up-town residents, advertisements for insertion in the TIMES will be received at No. 54 West 23d-st., junction of Broadway and 6th-av.; No. 308 West 23d-st., opposite Grand Opera-house, and No. 1,241 Broadway, between 30th and 31st sts., at same rates as are charged at office of publication.

☞ The NEW-YORK TIMES has opened a Branch office in Brooklyn at No. 44 Court-st opposite the City Hall, where advertisements will be received until 5 P. M.

☞ Throughout the Presidential campaign, we shall publish fuller reports of meetings and conventions in each State than any other New-York journal. The letters and dispatches we received from New-Hampshire and Connecticut afford examples of the thorough and impartial manner in which our correspondents will perform their work. Very full dispatches will be forwarded by telegraph, supplemented by careful letters. Our desire is to place before the public the latest and most trustworthy information, and we have made ample arrangements for that purpose.

As a further example of the thoroughness with which this is being done, we refer to our returns from the Connecticut elections, which were earlier, more complete, and more accurate than those of any other New-York paper.

We publish today a notice from the Bar Association, setting forth that, in their opinion, they have obtained sufficient evidence to convict the accused Judges, and that they "desire no further testimony." We hope the Judiciary Committee will be of the same opinion. At any rate, the evidence ought to be published, in order that we may all see what sort of a case has been made out. On Tuesday night the Bar Association will hold a meeting, and a report will probably be submitted on that occasion. The action of the Judiciary Committee will now be watched for with great solicitude; for if we cannot get rid of the corrupt Judges, all our other reforms will prove to be useless.

If Mr. GREELEY really wants to know "what is truth," we can help him by suggesting some few things which are not truth. It is not truth to say that he long ago "corrected an inaccurate report," meaning the report that he hoped Americans, North and South, would feel a like pride in the achievements of LEE and GRANT, JACKSON and SHERIDAN. That report is not inaccurate and never was corrected. It was taken from Mr. GREELEY's address at the Lincoln Club Rooms, June 13, 1871, and was "positively the last" version he made of his Vicksburg speech. Neither is it truth to try to produce the impression that his interview with JEFF. DAVIS was confined to "shaking hands" with him "among many citizens" who "called on him at his hotel." The Memphis Times described that interview in detail, and we prefer its records, contemporaneous and on the spot, to Mr. GREELEY's version, offered nearly a year after, and made with an interested purpose.

We have asked with what consistency any public journal can denounce one man for taking a small commission on the public printing, and defend Insurance Superintendent MILLER for taking a large one? In reply to this we are told that it was Mr. H. C. SOUTHWICK who took the latter commission, and not MILLER. The Tribune, which now defends MILLER again—having chopped round three times on that question—sufficiently disposed of that excuse when it said: "It is not probable that PARSONS paid it (the commission) without pretty good assurance that there was reason for it." Why should WEED, PARSONS & Co. have paid a commission on the insurance printing to SOUTHWICK? And why does not MILLER produce SOUTHWICK, who has mysteriously disappeared? His word might settle the point. In this, as in other cases, we cannot prove that anybody saw the money going into MILLER's pocket—therefore he is to get off scot free. We were told the same thing about TWEED, SWEENY, and all the rest of them.

Conspiracies, like curses and chickens, sometimes come home to roost. When the Erie Ring got the Tweed Legislature to take the power of calling them to legal account from their shareholders, and put it into the hands of the Attorney-General, they evidently imagined that the reign of Tammany and Tammany State officers would be indefinitely prolonged. But CHAMPLAIN has given place to BARLOW, and the latter proposes to make good use of the powers which were deposited in his office. The suit he has already commenced against JAY GOULD, F. A. LANE and others, ought to have been brought by the Erie Directors, but was not. Meantime Mr. GOULD smiles his melancholy smile, and protests that he knows of nothing wrong, nothing illegal, nothing even irregular. He is still of opinion that there never was a road more economically and profitably managed than the Erie during the time that he increased its debt and capital sixty-five millions of dollars. We shall see whether a Court of Justice will come to the same conclusions.

Mr. FENTON is sending round the country to Democratic newspapers copies of his speech on the New-York Custom-house, and those newspapers are praising its "noble utterances" and its "appeals to the country." They neglect to say, however, that the speech of Senator FENTON was anticipated in its substantial parts by the message of our much-abused President, and that the bill to which it relates has been allowed to be postponed by Mr. FENTON time and again on the very slightest pretexts. We would rather put faith in the President as a reformer, than in Senator FENTON.

The Legislature and the Charter.

Whatever may be the differences of opinion entertained at Albany in regard to the "Seventy's Charter," we hope there can be no doubt on one point—namely, that the Legislature ought not to adjourn without doing something for the City. We understand that some of the rural members say: "We have given up time enough to New-York City." Perhaps they will have the kindness to tell us what has come of it. In this part of the State we fail to see the result of their Herculean labors. Others, again, say that they "won't be dictated to by the Committee of Seventy." That is a spirit unworthy of men commissioned to perform a great and pressing duty. If they have been annoyed by the advice offered to them, is there any sense in making the entire body of the public pay for it? Ought not all personal considerations and feelings to be put on one side, and the welfare of the people alone to be considered?

Remembering the hope centered in the "Reform Legislature" just after the Fall elections, it seems impossible now to think that this Legislature may possibly separate without doing anything whatever to redress the evils under which we have suffered. If any suggestions are offered to legislators, they turn and say: "You are dictating to us—now we won't budge an inch." If no suggestions are made, they say: "The excitement about Reform in New-York is all over—we need not do anything." It is rather difficult to know how to act toward so touchy a body as this. However, we shall take the liberty of reminding members of the Legislature that the people of this City will be not a little dismayed to learn that nothing whatever is to be done for them. It will not help a man much in his future public life to say that he belonged to the "Reform Legislature" of 1872. Here we are today in precisely the same position that we were on the 10th of November last. We are warned that we had better not complain, because if we do members may "get their backs up" and refuse to do anything. Can they do much less than they have done? And is not this a very worthy spirit for Senators and Assemblymen to entertain with regard to their duties?

Certainly we are not impatient—we have waited three months for "something to be done," and patience has been its own reward—at least it has met with no other. All that we ask now is (we hope without offense to any member) that the Legislature will place the government of this City upon a sound footing before it separates. It will inflict an indelible disgrace upon itself if it leaves us under the operation of the Tweed Charter—the memory of which is tarnished by the vast robberies committed by virtue of its provisions. We have supported the Charter of the Committee of Seventy, because it was drawn up by independent and honest men, and because it gave a fair promise of working successfully. But if anybody can devise a better charter, we will support that. Only in heaven's name, give us something—do not behave so abominably as to play with the subject of City Reform all through the session, and then leave it just where you found it. We must get rid of the infamous "Tweed Charter." Rulers we shall be told that in saying this we are guilty of great presumption. But members of the Legislature will find that we are only expressing the general opinion of the public, and are therefore exercising our proper functions.

Many stories have reached us about the bargaining constantly going on between Republicans and Democrats at Albany, by means of which the present dead-lock has been brought about. Some men want to keep the offices they have got—others crave for offices which they have not got. What they ask about every measure is, how does said measure affect them? It is the old story—the politician is everybody; the taxpaying citizen nobody. "Never mind about the public so long as we can divide these offices satisfactorily among ourselves." That is the talk at Albany. By and by, it may be necessary to give names and point morals—at present we allude to the subject in general terms, and with disgust. It is shameful to think that a "Reform Legislature" should be bent more upon seeing that the spoils are fairly shared among their own friends, than that the public interests are protected. The time for doing either good or harm is rapidly passing away. We hope, for the sake of the reputation of the present members of this Legislature, (to say nothing of the welfare of the people,) that the brief space yet remaining may be honorably and profitably used.

Cleveland—Cincinnati.

On the 1st of May a mass convention will meet at Cincinnati, which, in its motives, and in many other respects, recalls vividly the now almost forgotten Cleveland Convention of 1864. The Cleveland Convention, like that of Cincinnati, was intended to break up the Republican Party, for the purpose of defeating the re-election of a President its supporters had unanimously favored four years before. In that case, as in this, there was no hope of electing, by Republican votes, any other Republican. That movement, like this, was commenced in order to force the regular organization to recognize the claims of the disaffected. When that became impossible, it degenerated into a flank attack on the Republican candidates, in the interest of the Democratic party, and as such was gradually deserted until the nominees withdrew in disgust.

The Cleveland movement had its headquarters in Missouri, and "the People's Provisional Committee," which, like the Jefferson City caucus of last January, assumed the paternity of the bolt, was engineered by that restless intriguer and inflated demagogue, B. GRATZ BROWN. In that case, as in this, this ambitious leader was followed by a few score of nobodies from the various States. We remember that from New-York LUCIUS ROBINSON, Ex-Controller, lent a little respectability to a motley crew, which included a few department clerks in Albany, a trio of merchants, a sub-editor of the Troy Times, (since dead,) and a lawyer or two of that vicinity. Mr. GREELEY was reputed to cast favoring glances on the movement, but his ambition was not so hot, and his head was cooler then than now, and he did not appear among the signers of the call, or at the Convention.

The pretexts put forward to justify the movement strikingly resembled those hit upon by the Cincinnati men. Then, as now, the schemers claimed to be in general accord with the party, but pretended to find in minor differences occasion for threatening as far as they could the success of the party. They protested their devotion to the ideas of the supremacy of the Constitution, the preservation of the Union and the suppression of the rebellion, just as their successors insist on their fidelity to the ideas of the Union, of emancipation, and of enfranchisement. But then, as now, there was a clamor about certain local rights which the National Government as a whole—not the Executive merely—was alleged to have violated, and about the demand for "integrity and economy" in the Government, which the reformers seem to have thought it wise to enforce at any and every cost. Then, as now, also, there was a pretense of going beyond the Administration and the mass of the people in a direction which the latter were gradually and surely taking. As now there is a demand for universal amnesty, so then there was a premature agitation for the constitutional abolition of slavery.

There was wild talk then, also, about enforcing the "Monroe doctrine," by men who had not the first glimmer of an idea as to what the Monroe doctrine of history really was, just as now Mr. GREELEY's manifesto prates about a tariff for revenue of which its author has not the faintest conception.

Then, as now, it was claimed that the regular organization was so under the control of the President, by means of patronage, that there was no chance for free discussion of either principles or candidate. The language of those days and of these was so strikingly similar that it is worth while to reproduce portions of it for the purpose of comparison.

"We do not recognize in the Baltimore Convention," said Mr. GRATZ BROWN and his then confederates, "the essential conditions of a truly national convention. Its proximity to the centre of all the interested influences of the Administration, its mode of convocation, the corrupting practices to which it has been, and inevitably will be, subjected, do not permit the people to assemble there with any expectation of being able to deliberate at full liberty." The following, the very echo of the above, is from Mr. GREELEY's letter to the authors of the Missouri call: "We make this departure from the ordinary methods of party action from a deep conviction that the organization to which we belong is under the control of those who will use it chiefly for personal purposes, and obstruct a free expression of opinion upon the important matters which the gentlemen whom you represent have laid before the people of the United States." Mr. GREELEY's sanctions are as gratuitous as were GRATZ BROWN's. There never was a Convention which more completely represented the views of the people than the Republican National Convention at Baltimore, in 1864; but it did not do so more thoroughly than will the Republican National Convention at Philadelphia, in June next. The former Convention contained among its members many of the ablest public men of the country, but not so many as, from present indications, will meet at Philadelphia.

Finally, it is to be pointed out that the Cleveland Convention, as the Cincinnati one will be, was held to serve purely personal ends. Its candidate, Gen. FREMONT, offered almost immediately to withdraw if any one but Mr. LINCOLN were named at Baltimore, just as Mr. GREELEY—candidate for the Cincinnati nomination—writes urging people to go to Cincinnati, saying, "I am not for GRANT if there is any help for it."

One striking point of difference, however, in the two Conventions, and one which does not commend the latest of the pair, is that at the former there was no prearranged bargain with Democrats. The unfortunate and desperate politicians of Cleveland were ready to endanger the success of their party, but they were not ready, as the Cincinnati men are, to go into battle under orders from the enemy.

Mr. Dana's Testimony.

Mr. CHARLES A. DANA recently made a series of outrageous charges against Secretary ROBESON. Instead of being compelled to support his charges as defendant in a libel suit, he was permitted by the Congressional Committee which investigated them to assume the attitude of a public prosecutor, and, with the aid of a lawyer, whose reputation naturally made him congenial to Mr. DANA, was given every opportunity to magnify to the utmost the injury which he had attempted to inflict upon the Secretary. Those who have read the testimony in this matter are aware that not a shadow of justification for his libels has yet been brought forward by Mr. DANA or his associate. The evidence given by Mr. DANA himself is about the most humiliating confession of ignorance and reckless abuse of his position which has ever been made public. He has libeled many persons, men and women. It will be Mr. ROBESON's fault fault if he escapes now unpunished.

He was examined under oath on Friday last, as to the most important charges which he had made. He had asserted that Mr. ROBESON had agreed to pay ROACH & SON seven hundred thousand dollars for new machinery for the Tennessee, when there are responsible machine-builders who would have contracted to furnish the new boilers and engines for three hundred thousand dollars. When asked, "What responsible builder will agree to do that?" he answered, "I can't say that any one will; I was informed that Mr. MURPHY said that he would do it." Afterward he said, "I think the statement of the engines of the Tennessee was exaggerated;" and further on: "In regard to that we were evidently mistaken." Mr. DANA had also charged that Secretary ROBESON and Mr. CATTELL had induced Mr. COGHLAN to introduce a bill into the House of Representatives, directing the Secretary to build, at an expense of five hundred thousand dollars, and at the earliest practicable moment, two excavated dry-docks at Mare Island Navy-yard—the object of the bill being to enable Mr. ROBESON and Mr. CATTELL to make large sums by the sale of bricks. Here is the pitiable confession of Mr. DANA as to his utter want of any authority whatever for this charge:

Q.—What induced you to say that Mr. COGHLAN had been induced by the Secretary and by CATTELL to take part in this thing? A.—A large quantity of bricks were required for this purpose, and the brick business appeared to be so profitable in that direction that we supposed there might be some connection between them.

Q.—Is that the only ground for the statement? A.—That is the authority for it.

Mr. ROBESON had also been accused of dishonesty on the ground that he had made a large fortune since he accepted office, in evidence of which it was further asserted that he spent more money than he could honestly afford to spend. As to this charge Mr. DANA was asked by Mr. ROBESON, "Have you ever taken any means to know whether I was a rich man or a poor man?" The answer was "I only know from public notoriety;" and when again asked, "Have you any idea how much I spend in any way or chance?" Mr. DANA answered "No," thus admitting that this particular charge was without any foundation whatever within his own knowledge, or that of any one whom he could indicate. Indeed, in regard to the whole series of libels on Mr. ROBESON, which have from time to time appeared in the Sun, Mr. DANA confessed that he had no personal knowledge as to their truth or falsehood. They were exhibited to him, and after he had admitted that he had written them, he was asked: "Are any of the facts thus stated within your own knowledge?" and his answer was: "No, Sir, not within my personal knowledge." He has charged Mr. ROBESON with robbing the country of "over a million." He is now obliged to own that he can prove nothing more than some alleged irregularities in reference to contracts. As to any pretense for saying that Mr. ROBESON derived the slightest profit from these transactions, there is none. The whole series of charges are false and cowardly. It is only a wonder that DANA did not accuse some of the Secretary's female relatives of sharing in the plunder.

This is the net result of Mr. DANA's examination. He confesses that he has made charges which he cannot substantiate, and has made them without knowing whether they were true or false. He cannot remember who told him—he cannot recollect anything about it. This absolute failure to fix the slightest stain on Mr. ROBESON's character will increase the confidence which the public has always reposed in him, and will at the same time have the unlooked-for effect of placing Mr. DANA in rather a better light before the public than he has previously occupied. His testimony was so humiliating to himself that no one will doubt that he spoke the truth when he admitted that he knew nothing of the truth of the charges which he had brought against the Secretary. It therefore appears to follow that Mr. DANA is a man who respects the obligation of an oath. If his examination should have the unexpected result of convincing people that the editor of the Sun restricts himself to libel and the abuse of privacy, and that he really is unwilling to commit perjury, at least before a Congressional Committee, he may justly feel that his last appearance in the character of a self-proclaimed libeler has rather benefited than injured him in public estimation.

Civil and Police Justices' Courts.

What has become of the bills before the Judiciary Committee of the Assembly, providing for the reorganization of the Civil and Police Justices' Courts in the City of New-York? We hope they will not be allowed by the friends of reform on the Committee to remain longer unreported, and we trust there is no truth in the rumor that improper influences have been brought to bear on some of the members to stifle these bills in the Committee. The people demand that these Courts shall no longer be made the instruments, in the hands of unscrupulous politicians, of tyranny and injustice. They also ask that the Police Justices shall no longer use the powers of their office to punish their political enemies, and protect criminals who are their friends, and that the office of Police Justice, with all its power and responsibility, shall not be prostituted to serve the selfish ends of mere politicians, but shall be held by men of such high character and ability as will insure a fair and impartial administration of criminal justice in this City.

The Police Justices ought to be appointed. The "Ping-uglies" of the Fourth and Sixth Wards are not competent to select proper Police Justices. It is quite clear that the new judiciary article of the constitution authorizes the Legislature to create in cities inferior local courts of civil and criminal jurisdiction, the Justices whereof "shall be chosen by the electors of cities, or appointed by some local authorities thereof." There have been various suggestions made as to the precise local authority in which this appointing power should be vested. This question is in the hands of the Committee; let them come as speedily as possible to some decision on the point, and report the bill as soon as may be to the Assembly. The Civil or District Court bill has some very important and beneficial changes. It is drawn in the interests of the most important of all reforms—judicial reform. The people of the City of New-York feel that a thorough reform in their judiciary, from the highest to the lowest Courts, is the most salutary measure of reform to be accomplished.

Let the Legislature see to it that this reform is assured to the people. It is not exaggeration to say that, as justice is at the present time administered in the Courts in this City, neither the rights of property nor the personal liberty of the citizen are safe in the City of New-York today.

We hope to see the bills for the reorganization of the inferior civil and criminal Courts of this City reported at once by the Judiciary Committee of the Assembly; and let there be no talk of the adjournment of the Legislature until this and the other most wholesome and all-important reforms in the Judiciary of this City now in progress are carried to a complete and successful issue.

Reform in Congress.

It is becoming evident that the Legislative branch of the Government, which is generally supposed to be more immediately representative of the views of the people, is behind the Executive branch, and behind the people themselves, in desire for advanced measures of reform, both Administrative and Legislative. It is certain that if Congress were to give the sanction of law to the recommendations of the President's Message, addressed to them at the opening of the session, the members would stand much better before the people than they do now. At the present moment the Executive is held responsible for everything. A desperate effort is being made to defeat the re-election of the President. The authors of this effort justify their course by alleging the existence of certain evils, which, so far as they exist, exist through the fault of Congress. In regard to most of them, the President is simply powerless, and has done all that he can do to remove them. It is only fair that Congress should put an end to this injustice. The Executive is a single man, and his position is conspicuous. It is easy to charge everything to him. His powers are ill-defined, and it is not difficult to represent him as the author, or the tolerator, of all that is faulty. Congress, on the other hand, though prominent as a body, cannot be held to definite individual responsibility. Members vote or fail to vote, and go home to their constituents, and no one thinks of trying to attach to one of them the 320th part of the blame for the commissions or omissions of the whole. It is on this account the more incumbent on Congress to sustain the Executive in his recommendations of measures which are good in themselves, and which the public imperatively demand.

There are three subjects which are being used by the movers in the Cincinnati Convention to estrange some portion of the Republican Party. These are amnesty, revenue reform, and civil service reform. They constitute the sum total of the capital of the professed reformers. The only other matter which there is any pretense of bringing into prominence is the encroachments of the Federal Government upon the field of State authority, but that is merely added to the "liberal" platform as a convenient plank to bridge over the gulf between them and their Democratic allies. In point of fact, the Republican Liberal leaders are largely responsible for the alleged encroachments. Mr. TRUMBULL was the author of the Reconstruction laws. Mr. SUMNER—if he is to be classed with the disaffected—held in so many words that the State Governments in the South had been destroyed by their own acts—felo-de-se, he described it—and ought to be remanded to a territorial condition. Mr. GREELEY was clamorous for the Election law which is the most plausible object of attack against "centralism." Any solicitude on their part concerning the aggregation of Federal power is, therefore, a mere sub to the Democratic whale.

The three subjects we have mentioned, however, are legitimate objects, not of disorganizing movements that threaten the stability of Republican principles, but of reasonable, popular agitation. On these three subjects the President is right, and far in advance of any completed, and, we fear, any probable action of Congress. He has strongly recommended general amnesty, and Congress has failed, in its tortuous and hesitating course, to sustain his recommendation. Does any one suppose that if the doctrine of the President's Message had been applied, the few exceptions which he suggested (but did not urge) would afford a pretext for the alienation of a single Republican? And is it certain that the course of Congress, wasting its time on long bills for the removal of disabilities, in which numerous frauds have already been discovered, while it refuses sanction to the general principle, may not give ground for some such alienation, and that of a sincere character?

The President has also laid down the principles of such revenue reform as would fully meet the demands of the people. So far, all that Congress has done toward carrying them out, has resulted in a perplexing disagreement between the two Houses, of which no one can tell the issue, and which is every day aggravating the evils so bitterly complained of.

The President caused to be framed by a distinguished commission, chosen from among the leaders of the civil service reform agitation, a body of rules for freeing the service from the injurious influence of politics. He now asks Congress for an appropriation absolutely necessary to the proper development of the reform, and gets half of what is required. He also asks to have the principle of the reform embodied in law, and is met by propositions of very little value in themselves, while even these are only brought up to be postponed month after month. Now the delay over civil service reform is more likely than any other cause to produce dissatisfaction in the Republican Party. Is it fair, then, or wise, for Congress to continue to treat it in the contemptuous spirit so far shown toward it, leaving the Executive to bear the blame? These are matters which cannot too soon receive the attention of Congress.

MINOR TOPICS.

Gen. FRANCIS A. WALKER, the accomplished Superintendent of the Census, is now distributing the first copies of that part of the census containing the statistics of wealth, taxation and public indebtedness. Under Gen. WALKER's accurate and intelligent supervision, this part of the work, which is a very important one, has been perfected beyond anything we have previously had. It embraces two tables, the first giving the totals for each State and Territory, with a comparison with 1860, and the second giving current statistics for each county in each State and Territory.

The cable brings us a somewhat indefinite report of a "conference" at Bordeaux, held by a Catholic priest, and largely attended by Catholic priests, to denounce the doctrine of Papal infallibility. The mere fact of a priest resorting to what was evidently a public meeting to spread his views in opposition to those of the Church authorities, shows that the movement begun so boldly before the Council by Père HYACINTHE is increasing in force. After many useless revolts and secessions it would seem that the power of the Papacy is beginning to be actually broken.

When "TOMMY" HADDEN was removed from his sphere of usefulness in the Fourth Ward, by a vigorous effort of New-Jersey justice, most people supposed that the business of "shanghaing" sailors for vessels leaving the harbor of New-York had received its death-blow; but it appears that this rather comforting conclusion is not borne out by the facts—that is, if credit is to be placed in the testimony of a young man named ROBERT SEYMOUR, who lately returned to his home at Williamsburg after an absence of six weeks. SEYMOUR states that he had been drugged while partaking of some refreshment in a New-York saloon, and that, when he returned to consciousness, he found himself, with several other "shanghaed" persons on board of an outward-bound whaler. An attempt was made to induce them to sign articles for a voyage. He and three of the victims obstinately refused to comply, and the Captain, thinking that it would not be wise to resort to extreme measures, had them set on shore near the mouth of Chesapeake Bay, whence they made the best of their way home. Now, it is barely possible that Master SEYMOUR may have concocted this romantic story, to account for his sudden disappearance, but this suspicion should not prevent the Harbor Police from instituting a rigid investigation into all the circumstances. If the old gang has resumed operations under a new leader it ought to be known, and the sooner the better.

A Texan Grand Jury has presented an extensive indictment to the United States Court for the Eastern District of Texas. The document will be found on our second page. It is nothing less than an indictment of the Mexican Government, and especially the Mexican General, JUAN NEPOMUCENO CORTINA, who is graphically described as "occupying the double position of officer of the Mexican Army upon the line of the Bravo, and cattle and horse thief on both frontiers." It will naturally occur to our readers that the indicted parties are not strictly within the jurisdiction of the Court. This the jury propose to remedy by a company of cavalry, whose functions are thus foreshadowed:

"A mounted force properly handled could follow marauders into the fastnesses of the chaparrals, pursue with Parthian vigor and perseverance over the broad prairies, could give protection and roll back upon Mexico the wave of invasion."

Dr. WILLIAM M. WELSH, the physician in charge of the Municipal Hospital, at Philadelphia, has just concluded a very interesting report of the small-pox cases which have come under his supervision during the present year. This report shows that the admission of patients increased from five in January, 1871, to 409 in December the same year. Altogether, within the period referred to, 1,237 patients were admitted. Of this number, 1,041 were white, and 196 black. There were 361 deaths. The mortality among the blacks was greater than among the whites, for the reason, as Dr. WELSH thinks, that the latter are not only more susceptible to the disease, but that a larger proportion of them have never been vaccinated. The mortality among women seems to have been greater than among the men, and this circumstance might also be accounted for on the ground of susceptibility. The average number of deaths among the patients who had been vaccinated in infancy was very considerably less than among those who had never been vaccinated; and it was invariably found that where the vaccine cicatrices were well marked the danger of death was proportionately reduced.

A book has just appeared in Paris by the Duke of GRAMMONT. That nobleman, it will be remembered, was Foreign Minister of France when the Franco-French war broke out in 1870. He had only just been appointed, and it was reported that the selection of him for the post was in itself an offense to the Government of Berlin, to which he had made himself, on previous occasions, especially obnoxious. Under these circumstances, one is not surprised to learn from a notice in the Independance Belge, a tolerably impartial source, that the work is impregnated with a bitter vigorous of M. de GRAMMONT. In fact, a political work which was not so flavored would have very small chance of being read in Paris today. The critic in the Independance pronounces the work as not deficient in literary ability, but failing to make any important new points.

AMUSEMENTS.

Announcements and Notes.

"Amleto" will be sung by Miss NILSSON and the Strakosch Opera Troupe at Booth's Theatre, this afternoon. M. THOMAS' opera will be represented with the superb scenery used during the run of the tragedy....At the Academy of Music, this evening, Mme. PAREPA-ROSA, Mr. SANTLEY and Signor WACHTEL will sing in "Rigoletto"....At BOOTH'S to-night, "Plot and Passion" will be performed for the first time, with Miss CARLOTTA LECLERCQ in the leading rôle....The Broadway Theatre will, this evening, be opened by Miss BURNHAM. "Gold," a new play, is to be acted for the first time....At LINA EDWIN'S Theatre, the CHAPMAN Sisters will make their debut in "Little Don Giovanni."....The fifth Philharmonic concert of the present season took place at the Academy of Music, on Saturday evening. The magnificent "Erotica" symphony was done by the orchestra, under Mr. BERGMANN, and it may be claimed that to hear that immortal work so skillfully rendered as it is by the Philharmonic was sufficient to repay attendance. The lack of distinguished soloists, however, is sadly felt in these concerts, and when the performance of a violoncello concerto by Mr. BERGNER, a very conscientious but in no way eminent artist, and the execution of two choruses by the Liederkranz Society, are offered as potent attractions, forebodings of a still drearier future are prone to beset the least exacting lover of music. The concerto was GOLTERMAN'S first, and the choruses were respectively FRIEY'S "Wie Kann der Liebe," and LACHNER'S stirring "Kriegers Gebet." Besides these numbers, the bill included MENDELSSOHN'S beautiful overture called "Fingal's Cave," and BARGIEL'S "Prometheus" overture.

A Saturday Reception.

An effort to fulfill the intention of the founders of the Lotos Club by giving a fitting prominence to the artistic element of that prosperous association, culminated on Saturday evening in a most agreeable entertainment and reception. The scene of the affair lay in the Weber piano ware-rooms and the Gurney Gallery, at the corner of Sixteenth-street and Fifth-avenue. Five hundred invitations admitting thereto had been issued, and with a very gratifying result. The alacrity with which the artists of the City responded to the call for their co-operation was proof of the perfect understanding existing among them as to the object of the assemblage, and of their appreciation of its excellence. So strong a congress of public performers has probably never met in this City. A list of the guests best known to the public will bear out this assertion. Conspicuous in the brilliant throng were Miss Clara Louise Kellogg, Mme. Parepa-Rosa, Mme. Mulder-Fabbri, Miss Annie Louise Cary, Miss Kate Moreani, Mme. Anna Bishop, Mme. Brinkerhoff, Mlle. Marie Leon Duval, Mrs. Zelda Seguin, Mme. Van Zandt, Miss Doria, Mrs. Aynsley Cook, Miss Caroline, Miss Clara Fox, Miss Franklin Rose, Miss Graziella Ridgway, Mme. Melanie Roboux, and Mrs. Picton Rowe. The artists of the sterner sex were Messrs. Santley, Capoul, Jamet, Barré, Ferranti, Tom Kast, Ronconi, Jacob Muller, Randolfi, G. F. Hall, S. C. Campbell, J. R. Thomas, W. S. Legrath, McDonald, Aynsley Cook and Charles Lyall. The violin was represented by Señor Sarasate, Dr. Damrosch, Signor Padovani and Mlle. Filomeno. Among the pianists were Messrs. S. B. and W. F. Mills, James M. Webb, R. Vilanova, John N. Pattison, Alfred Pease, Lindsay Sloper, G. W. Colby, F. Korbay, Agramonte, Carlo Rosoni, Moreau, Rugel, Mme. Louis Dachauer, Mlle. Aline, Marie Manzocchi. The managerial forces of the country sent Messrs. Max Strakosch, Carl Rosa, Lester Wallack, Max Maretzek, J. H. Mapongie, P. S. Gilmore, L. Albites, H. Jarrett and D. De Vivo. And amid a host of actors were noticeable Messrs. Fisher, Harkins and Folk. The proceedings of the evening, as hinted at early, included a conversazione and a performance. It may be imagined that a concert was a most successful incident of the affair. A little of the features of a programme that will never be exceeded in liberality may be referred to. Miss KELLOGG sang exquisitely, "She Wandered Down the Mountain Side," Mr. SANTLEY, after acknowledging a greeting of extreme cordiality, sang, "Oh, Ruddier than the Cherry" and "The Surrup Cup," with an unparalleled effect. Mr. KAST was heard in an aria from "La Forza del Destino," which he delivered with much charm and impressiveness. Piano recitals by Messrs. WEBB and MILLS were of a character heartily applauded. Mme. VAN ZANDT, Signor RANDOLFI, Mr. MACDONALD, Miss MORENI and Mrs. SEGUIN sang afterward, and Señor SARASATE contributed a rendering of WIENAWSKI'S "Légende" which could not be excelled in sentiment or finish of execution. The concert, it only remains to say, was interrupted by an adjournment for the purpose of refreshment. Toward 1 o'clock the building, which had been tastefully decorated and was illuminated a giorno, resumed its wonted appearance. The Committee of Arrangements for the reception consisted of Messrs. H. G. Stebbins, A. C. Wheeler, F. A. Schwab, Albert Weber, H. D. Palmer, G. D. Waring, G. W. Hundy, J. E. Hundy, Park Smith, T. J. Hall, T. E. Baker and C. H. Livingston.

RHODE ISLAND.

Satisfactory Result of the Election—Disappointed Expectations of the Democracy.

From the Providence Journal, April 6.

We have complete returns from the election in all the towns. According to our figures, Gov. PADELFORD receives 9,456 votes, Mr. ARNOLD 8,199 votes, and there are 87 scattering. Majority for PADELFORD, 1,176. Lieut.-Gov. STEVENS has 8,860 votes, Mr. CUTLER 8,832, and 89 scattering votes are reported. Majority for CUTLER, 140. We have reports of scattering votes for Lieutenant Governor in only seven of the thirty-six towns. We have information of some votes counted for CUTLER that will doubtless be counted against him in the official canvass. The count by the Committee of the General Assembly has usually detected errors to a greater or less extent. Last year the official count reduced the vote of one candidate ninety-eight, and of another eighteen. The apparent majority of Mr. CUTLER is not very likely to be overcome, but there is a bare possibility that the General Assembly may be required to choose between the Republican and Democratic candidates for Lieutenant-Governor. Notwithstanding the bitter personal run upon Mr. PADELFORD in this city and in Woonsocket, and the great personal popularity of Mr. ARNOLD in his own town of North Providence, which, in the three towns, cost Mr. PADELFORD about 900 votes, he receives 720 votes more than last year, and 2,123 more than when he was first elected. The vote for Lieut.-Gov. STEVENS is 1,488 greater than it was last year. The remainder of the Republican State ticket is elected by not less than 2,100 majority. The majority last year was 3,342. The result of the grand union of Anti-Republicans and Democrats, the payment of the registry tax of seven thousand Democratic voters, and the iron nerve of money drawn from Republicans pockets to overthrow the Republican nominations, has been a reduction of the Republican majority in the State about 1,100. And in a single ward in this city 700 Republicans did not vote because their registry taxes were not paid. Yet we read in the present issue and far about a great Democratic victory in Rhode Island.

OUR STATE INSTITUTIONS—XXX.

The Woolen Mills of Amsterdam.

AMSTERDAM, THURSDAY, Feb. 29, 1872.

Of the hundreds who daily make the grand rush from New-York to the great business centres of the West, there are perhaps few who are at all aware of the numerous and exceedingly busy homes of industry, on a smaller scale than that to which they are accustomed, which are located all along their line of travel, and are growing rapidly into important seats of manufacture. "Can you tell me the name of the best hotel in Amsterdam?" inquired a fellow-traveler of me the other day. I at once confessed that my acquaintance with Amsterdam was confined to having once or twice run my finger over it while studying the Central time-table in my railroad-guide. "You don't tell me," he rejoined; "why, we do quite a large business in Amsterdam—our people do; but it so happens I've never been there before." Here was a possible idea for "Our State Institutions." I clung to the gentleman for about ten minutes, got from him a tolerable idea of Amsterdam, and shortly afterward found myself registering my name at the principal hotel in that active little town.

Amsterdam lies in the Mohawk Valley, about thirty-three miles from Albany, on the line of the New-York Central Railroad. From the heights above the valley, the Chuctanunda Creek rushes at right angles through the town into the Mohawk River, and furnishes ample water-power to the numerous mills built along its course. A bale of wool ought to be, if it is not, the emblem of the town of Amsterdam, for it is in the production of woolen manufacture that the majority of the mills are engaged.

I should think it would be difficult to find in the State of New-York a village of the same size as Amsterdam, which displays more manufacturing enterprise; for, although the manufacture of knitted goods forms by far the largest single branch of its business, knitting is not the only business carried on in the place. There is a large boot and shoe factory, a linseed-oil factory; the seed-crushing mill of KELLOGG & MILLER, which can turn out 2,000 gallons of oil a day; the paper-mill of STUART & CARMICHAEL, for making paper four-strand; SHULER'S steel carriage spring factory; MACELWAIN'S turbine water-wheel works; and other smaller factories. The consequence is that the village is enjoying a great amount of prosperity. New dwelling-houses are being built in all parts, and are let before they are half finished. In fact, the demand for houses is far in excess of the supply, and many families who would prefer to rent an entire house are compelled to be content with half a one. And yet, so rapidly are the woolen and other manufactures increasing, that persons are daily arriving from other towns and villages to swell the population. There were, a year ago, already seven large knitting-mills in the village, but four new mills have just been completed, or are on the point of completion—two in the heart of the village and two in outlying districts of the township, one at Rock City, and one at Hagarman's mills.

Wool knitting by machinery, as it is now carried on in Amsterdam, is a very different thing to what it was ten or twelve years ago. Invention has done marvels for it; and, moreover, it passed through a very troublous childhood. In fact, it was for some time doubtful whether the babe would ever be reared. Fortune and circumstances seemed to combine against it. It was in the year 1857 that ADAM W. KLINE, in conjunction with JOHN MAXWELL, built a small knitting-factory, about a mile and a half from the village. They struggled along manfully for two years, but in 1859 their manufactory was destroyed by fire. Fire is the one great antagonist that proprietors of knitting-factories have to contend against. They cannot buy wool suitable to their purposes which is not apt to have small stones in it; and as the wool is passed through the "picker," which separates it, a spark is often struck from one of these little stones, and the flimsy mass is in a blaze in a moment, and of course soon communicates the fire to the inflammable material piled about in all directions. Nothing daunted, however, by his misfortunes in 1859, Mr. KLINE built another knitting-factory in the following year. For some years business prospered, but just as Mr. KLINE was beginning to feel himself firmly established, his factory was again destroyed by fire in 1866. In the meantime other factories had sprung up, four new ones have since been built, and in 1868 Mr. KLINE rebuilt his factory, and is now running it most successfully in partnership with his son, HARLAN P. KLINE.

A short time ago a lady wrote to the NEW-YORK TIMES asking in what branches of manufacture in the State girls and women are employed. She should visit Amsterdam, and see the number of females employed there. In the knitting-mills nearly all the employes are girls; while at Mr. STEPHEN SANFORD'S carpet manufactory, in the upper part of the village, out of a labor force of 700 hands the bulk of the operatives are women and girls.

When the wool which is to be converted into fancy Cardigan jackets, knitted shirts, under-clothing, and stockings, comes to the mill, it is a dirty, tangled-looking mass. It is first carefully washed and dried, and then put through the picker to separate it, take out the hard lumps, and remove any extraneous matter. It is afterward combed and carded into a downy mass, and spun in thick strands on to bobbins. These bobbins are then carried up into the spinning-jack room, where they are placed on spindles, 200 at a time. One end of each strand is attached to other bobbins on the movable part of the jack, which the operative immediately draws back six feet. As the jack is drawn back, three feet of the thick strand is drawn from the bobbin and spun into a much finer strand, six feet in length; the fine strand at the same moment receiving a strong twist. As the jack returns, the second set of bobbins revolve rapidly and wind up in a few seconds the six feet of the fine spun strand. Backward and forward goes the jack till the whole of the coarse strand has been spun into a fine one and transferred from one set of bobbins to the other.

The wool is then ready for the knitting-room, to which it is immediately carried. The knitting-machine is a circular parcel of needles, something like elongated crochet needles, in and out of which the strand of wool is passed by machinery, knitting it into stitches as it goes along. A small cog depresses two of the needles at regular intervals, thereby making the "rib" which we so often see in knitted goods. As the machine revolves sixty times in a minute, there are, of course, sixty rows knitted in a minute, and as the work is pushed up from below it is caught by an ingenious automatic working contrivance from above, which draws it up over a wire body, until it reaches a roller immediately below the ceiling. This winds it off the wire frame in a flat-shaped roll, and when the roller will carry no more the fabric is ripped apart, and a fresh start made. About 200 yards a day is the average product of one set of machines; but in busy times they can do one much faster. The knitted wool is then ready to be made up into whatever goods are just then most in demand in the market. In one of the factories I went through they were making nothing but Cardigan jackets.

The leading knitting-factory is that of WILLIAM K. GREENE'S SONS'. They employ 200 hands, on thirteen sets of machines. Their average daily production is about 200 dozens of shirts and drawers, of different sizes. The business of SCHUYLER, BLOOD & Co. is nearly one-half that amount. Among the older firms, there are A. W. KLINE & SON, MCDONALD, KLINE & Co., JOHN M. CRANE, MCFARLAN & MARCELLUS, and the American Hosiery Mills, where they make a coarse grade of knitted stockings and socks. The two new mills in the village are owned by DE FOREST & WANNER and PHILIPS, DEET & LOWDEN. The new mill at Rock City is owned by JOHN MAXWELL, the gentleman who, in company with Mr. KLINE, started the first mill at Hagarman's, which now belongs to H. BELLING & SON. A small portion of the knitted goods made in these factories is sent to Chicago, but the great bulk is sold in New-York.

Mr. STEPHEN SANFORD'S carpet manufactory is supposed to be the most extensive one in the United States under one sole proprietorship and management. Mr. SANFORD has no partners. And yet so thorough are the arrangements, so like clock work is the machinery of his business, that when he was away, representing his district in Congress for two years, everything went on just as usual. The business is an old one. It was established in 1829, and has come down to Mr. SANFORD by inheritance.

The factory buildings stand on the high ground, away from the river, on the Chuctanunda Creek, at the point where the creek passes through the village. They are most extensive, comprising washing and drying houses, large buildings where the carding, combing and spinning are carried on, dye-houses, buildings for the weaving looms, and pattern and packing rooms. Some idea of the extent of these edifices may be gathered from the fact that 700 operatives, mostly females, are employed in them, and that the average production of the entire factory is 1,000 yards of carpet a day.

None but the very commonest wool is suitable for carpet manufacture. The finer wools have not sufficient toughness and fibre to enable them to resist the rough wear which a carpet always gets. Mr. SANFORD told me that he prefers the coarse wools of Russia and the Mediterranean; but to judge from the stock of material in his store-house, one would think he had ransacked the wool markets of the world and bought up all the worst of their refuse. There are black, white and brown wools, all dirty, tangled, and matted together in a way which makes it seem almost impossible that they can ever be manufactured into the brilliant, many-hued carpets which encumber the store-rooms.

The wool is first of all thoroughly washed, and is then thrown, completely saturated and dripping, into the hydraulic extractor, a large receptacle, something like a huge cauldron, which revolves very rapidly. A few seconds after the extractor is started, the wool and the cauldron alike are lost to sight from the rapidity of revolution. I asked the operative who had charge of it how many revolutions the extractor made in a minute. He replied, "Three thousand, Sir." Such a momentum appears almost incredible. The extractor is about four feet across; therefore, a given spot on it would travel a distance of twelve feet 3,000 times in one minute, for at the rate of 410 miles an hour. In a few minutes, what was dripping wool is taken out so nearly dry that there is only a slight feeling of dampness to the touch. The wool is then taken upstairs to the drying-room, where it is laid out in layers on extensive sheets of wire-netting. A powerful blast of hot air is forced into the room, and is drawn by an under-current downward through the wool. By this means the wool is quickly dried, and is ready for combing, drawing and carding. The spinning of the wool seemed to me an endless business. At first the strands are as thick as your finger; but they are spun again and again, each time into a smaller strand, till they have been reduced to the required fineness. The wool is then wound from the bobbins into skeins and is sent away to the color-house to be dyed. The brighter colors of the dyed skeins have a very gaudy appearance. But this gaudiness is lost in the careful harmonizing of colors in the process of weaving. It has often been a mystery to me how they weave such beautiful and many-colored patterns in carpets; but, putting the machinery on one side, it is a very simple operation to watch. The pattern is punched on a series of plates of thick card-board; certain notes corresponding to certain colors and the pieces of card-board being fastened together, like the photographic plates in a revolving stereoscope. The card-board pattern presses against the pins which govern the many cords forming the web and the wool; and, of course, where there are holes the pins pass through the card-board, and so allow certain of the cords to take a different position as the shuttle flies backward and forward. The weaver stands before his loom with as many shuttles on either side of him as he has colors to weave. The shuttles are placed one below the other; and by raising or depressing them with a lever the right shuttle is brought into play. When the weaving of the carpet is completed, it is carefully gone over by experienced hands, and all lost and faulty stitches are put in with a common carpet-needle. But the carpet is covered all over with short woolen bristles. To remove these it is passed through the dresser, a machine very similar in its operation to the mowing-machine; for as the carpet passes through the dresser the bristles are all removed by a series of knives, arranged like those of a mower.

Mr. SANFORD manufactures all descriptions of ingrain, three-ply, and tapestry Brussels carpets. He has just completed a large four-story building, which he intends to devote entirely to the manufacture of Brussels carpet. Sixty large power looms are being placed in position in it, and will shortly be in operation. And yet Mr. SANFORD'S consumption of wool is already 1,500,000 pounds a year. Such a factory as this is a great nucleus of population; and in conjunction with the knitting-mills and other factories must, if all goes well, soon bring little Amsterdam to the front.

ARCTIC EXPLORATION

A New Steamer for the German Summer Expedition.

The Weser Zeitung gives a detailed description of the steamer now building at Bremerhaven, to be used for the Arctic expedition, projected for this Summer by the Austrian explorers, MM. PAYER and WEYPRECHT, and designed according to their special directions. The ship is to bear the name of Tegethoff, in memory of the Austrian Admiral. The length of the vessel is 128 feet, its breadth 26½ feet, its depth 13½ feet, and its tonnage 150 Bremen lasts. The engines are gauged at 95-horse power; their consumption of coal is 3 tons in twenty-four hours, and the ship holds fifty days' supply, beside coal for three years' heating and cooking. Its speed is six knots an hour. The material is strong oaken timber, measured on an average by fifty per cent stronger in all its dimensions than for ordinary vessels. The planking is double, and the better to resist the ice the bow is plated with iron. The entire length of the water-line is covered with green-heart wood, and a layer of heavy oaken beams, three feet apart, supplies additional strength from within. The cabins for the officers and scientific men are in the stern, the partitions-walls being double, and the interstices filled with sawdust and peat to keep out the cold. There is a saloon 14 feet by 11 feet, and there are six private cabins, measuring 5½ by 6½ feet each; a study measuring 7 by 8 feet, and a harmonium, the instruments, with a library, adjoining; and some other necessary offices. There are sixteen rore-cabins apportioned to the crew, each well but simply furnished. The entire crew, including officers and men, is to number twenty-four men, most of whom, from Wurtemberg, has quite recently engaged in Pleme. The Italian element preponderating. Italian is to be the common language on board. The vessel is provided with a surgeon, two Tyrolese chamois hunters, and a Norwegian harpooner. All the officers are Austrians. The keel of the vessel was laid on the 31st of January, and the steamer is to be launched before the end of the present month.

PONTOON LIFE.

Nine Months Aboard a French Hulk.

"A refugee Communist" sends the following story to the London Times:

"After my arrest, in the last days of May, 1871, I was taken to Versailles and slept for four nights on the plains of Satory, together with 20,000 other prisoners, men, women and children. No one was to stir during the night under pain of immediate execution. The rain was pouring down in torrents on the 27th, 28th and 29th. We were all drenched, and yet forbidden to move. Sixty prisoners died during the night of the 28th from the effects of the weather. A well-known painter beside me was wounded by a bullet aimed at another man whose agony had obliged him to rise. On the 29th 600 of us—myself among the number—were thrust into cattle-trucks without seats, with several "guardians of the peace," revolvers in hand, ready to blow the brains out of the first man who betrayed any suspicious movements. I shall always remember the twenty-four hours of agony which I spent then, without either food or drink, and when we at last reached Lorient several women were in a dying state.

The population of Lorient showed no ill-feeling against us as we were marched through the streets, bound for the port. We were shackled. The sergents de ville and argousins conducted us on board the Prudence, to be kept there for forty-eight hours until the pontoon La Vengeance was fit to receive us. It was on the 1st of June that I boarded this watery prison, in which I was to remain for no less than nine months. On arriving there we had to submit to the most wanton brutality on the part of our keepers; there was no necessity whatever for this, for most of my companions were enfeebled, or ill, or dejected. The only object handed us in the shape of bed and covering was an old threadbare rug, rotten with legions of insects, I was inclined to think, more than most of my comrades, being quartered in a battlery where light could penetrate through the port-holes; while a great number of my fellow-prisoners, who had done no worse than I, were stowed on the lower deck. I do not think many of these unhappy creatures ever saw the sky for nine months.

La Vengeance is an old man-of-war. The two other pontoons, Penélope and Prudence, were dismasted and covered with tiles. The battery of La Vengeance, where I remained was divided into two compartments, separated by trellis work. The lower deck was divided in the same way, thus making four chambers. The prisoners were in some sort under water, in a kind of case, for a stout trellis surrounded each chambrée. Marines and sailors were on continual guard in the corridors, with cutlasses in their hands. On the first day, and ever after, our beads were the bare boards, with one county rug to protect us from the cold. Many sleepless nights did I pass, but after an experience of two months I was fain to submit to it. Every morning the drum used to beat the Diane at 5 o'clock, and every one must be up, unless he wished to be incarcerated for twenty days in a cachot situate in the hold of the hulk. At first, the Quartermaster ordered us to form in pièce de dix, (I quote his expression,) and to elect a chef de plat. His duty consisted in receiving our food through the trellis. Each man was allowed half a pound of bread for breakfast, and nothing else. As to our drink, we had plenty of water from the tank in the battery. Not so on board the Prudence. The prisoners were there obliged to drink veery foul water through an india-rubber tube at certain hours of the day. The following is a complete programme of the regimen we were subjected to: At half-past 5 o'clock in the morning, breakfast, consisting, as I said before, of half a pound of coarse bread, somewhat similar to that we had eaten in the latter days of the siege of Paris. At 6 we washed the battery, throwing about 600 litres of sea water on the floor. This process, which lasted two hours, was a relief to the prisoners, for it gave them the opportunity of a little exercise. At 8 we washed our linen; at 9 a few lucky men received the letters that came addressed to them, and which were always opened beforehand by the officers on guard. The doctor used to come at that time, and he had plenty of work in store, for the miserable diet was too much for many poor fellows. He invariably prescribed sulphate of quinine. In spite of his care, fifty men died of scurvy within three months. At 11 o'clock our dinner was given us; it consisted of half a pint of pea soup, a quarter of a pound of bread, and seventy grammes of biscuit. At 12½ the prisoners of service were again called up to clean the compartment. We had supper at 4 o'clock—that is, half a pint of broth, dry peas that could not be eaten, 125 grammes of bread and ninety grammes of biscuit. Such was our daily fare. It may seem bad enough on paper, but the reality was still worse. I knew some prisoners who died at much from starvation as from fever. At 7½ the retreat sounded, and at 8 a blow with a cane on the wall was a signal for absolute silence. From time to time those among us who were regarded by the officers with less distrust than the rest were allowed to go on deck for a few minutes. Our cooking utensils will give you an idea of our fare; we had a wooden bucket for ten men, two tin cups, one spoon, and—nothing else. From the 10th of November we had, it is true, twenty-five centilitres of wine and sixty grammes of meat on Sunday; and from that date we were given twice a week some salt beef; but this was so bad that none could eat it, and more than half of the prisoners became scorbutic.

During September a number of police agents came down from Paris to inspect us. We were closely scrutinized by them, probably to see whether any repris de justice were among us. One of my comrades, on being insulted by a turnkey, uttered a few indignant words, on which a Lieutenant struck him with his cane, kicked him, and, after further maltreating him, sent him to the cells in the hold, where he remained thirty days. To be in the cells entailed the withdrawal of half a ration, and of wine on Sunday, and the cachot was so narrow that the prisoner could scarcely move in it.

M. JULES SIMON came one day with his son on board La Vengeance, and, in order to ascertain each man's real position and degree of guilt, he remained twenty minutes among 600 men. Many knew him already. One old man, who had been taken by mistake, spoke to him, and M. JULES SIMON promised to have him released. In spite of this assurance this old man was liberated only in January. The Minister said that in a remnant of 40,000 men some must be honest and innocent, and yet not one of us felt the effects of M. JULES SIMON'S words.

For eight months I led this dreary life. Our numbers daily diminished—not from the mere as liberté of any prisoner, but from death. Toward the end of January I was dying with scurvy, when, on a welcome afternoon, I was called up, and dragged myself painfully on deck, and then I was told, without any explanation, to return my rug and spoon. Still ignorant of my fate, I was embarked for Lorient, taken to the Préfecture, with a batch of others, and given a passport for Bordeaux, with four francs to live upon on my way there. I was then dispatched in a slow train to Paris, whence, after a sojourn of five hours, and without being permitted to see any of my friends, I started again, and two days after I arrived at Bordeaux, penniless and almost starving. I had no time to look about. The Commissary of Police took my passport from me, and despatched me to a steamboat which was on the point of starting for Folkestone. I arrived at this last town in a pitiable condition, weak from disease, absolutely destitute, and friendless. I made my way to London on foot, and had it not been for the charity of the good people who gave me a piece of bread here and there on the way, I think I should have starved before reaching this metropolis.

A TIMELY HINT.

The Bar Association and the Judiciary Committee.

ROOMS OF THE BAR ASSOCIATION, April 6, 1872.

An editorial article in Saturday's TIMES, a short article which appeared some time since in the Evening Post, expressing the opinion that the evidence before the Judiciary Committee tended rather to exonerate than to implicate Judge MCCUNN, and the daily reports of the evidence, (always necessarily imperfect and frequently unaccountably inaccurate in respects for which the responsibility must be elsewhere than with the reporters,) have constrained the Bar Association Committee to break the silence which thus far they have preserved, and to say that they desire no further testimony, and that in their judgment the most effectual answer to such articles as those above referred to will be the publication of the evidence which has been taken. That will be the most reliable means of showing what is the case which has been made. This evidence the Bar Association Committee have been compelled to withhold by the injunction of the Judiciary Committee, from which they are not yet relieved.

JOSHUA M. VAN COTT,
JOHN E. PARSONS,
ALBERT STICKNEY,
Committee.

Secretary Robeson and C. A. Dana.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Some months ago I wrote you a few lines, relative to the attacks by the New-York Sun upon the national Administration, as also against President GRANT personally.

I then thanked you for your able article in reply to the same.

Permit me now to indulge in a few comments on your report in this morning's paper of the evidence given yesterday by DANA himself before the Naval Investigating Committee.

Never before have I read of so complete and overwhelming a refutation of malicious slander, and deliberate falsehood, as was then revealed.

For months and weeks this man had, through the columns of his miserable sheet, maligned, abused and reviled not only the Executive but each and every department of the Administration. His slanders against the private and public acts of the President were so palpably untrue that very few would give them consideration. To those who knew the motive, these attacks were held as simply contemptible; and I am well assured that your article, in reply thereto, was, by all who read it, considered as a complete answer. Failing in this, our vexatious editor next turned the shafts of his spleen against the Navy Department, and the Secretary in particular; and not content with assailing his public acts, he paraded his private affairs before the public. Day after day the editorial columns of the Sun were filled with accusations, which, if true, were sufficient to condemn the Secretary to severe penalties.

Finally, the investigation, for which an editor had so long prayed, was ordered—and yesterday, he was brought face to face with the man he had so recklessly abused. Secretary ROBESON could hardly wish for a more complete vindication than that given in the evidence of DANA himself.

Let us glance briefly at his answers to the searching questions of the Secretary:

1. The article was written on information from parties whose names he dared not reveal.

2. He had not taken the trouble to give the slightest investigation to said reports.

3. As usual in all such cases, his memory proved most treacherous, and he could not remember from whom said information came, though at the outset he declared that to reveal the names of his informant would entail misery on the same.

And yet in such data as this he pronounced Secretary ROBESON as "the greatest robber in the country."

In the Sun of 26th February he stated that 200,000 tons of coal would be consumed by the navy in 1872, and charged that the profits thereon to ROBESON & CATTELL would amount to over $1,300,000. When interrogated on this subject, he acknowledged error as regarding the quantity of coal, but could make no satisfactory reply to the last accusation. Was it becoming a gentleman to permit such an error to remain without explanation for nearly two months, when, as he confesses, he knew it to be unfounded? Surely such conduct destroys completely the reliability of the whole story.

Relative to the further accusation, that the Secretary had illegally drawn money from the Treasury, putting the same into his own pocket, this brilliant writer, when questioned, had forgotten the name of his informant, knew absolutely nothing about the matter, could not remember the date when he so accused the Secretary, though in his paper he had distinctly declared that the money had been drawn and given over to Secretary ROBESON. Further comment on this point would be useless.

Despite the fact that in the Sun, March 6, he had accused the Secretary of swindling the Government through the sending of bricks to California, he was unable to remember any such article, or any such accusation, and admitted that his information on the subject was merely hearsay, and consequently unreliable.

When examined relative to the sum total of Secretary ROBESON'S swindles, which he stated as $1,400,000, he was completely nonplussed, admitted exaggerations in many cases, and confessed ignorance throughout.

Finally, when questioned as to his general charges against the Secretary, and requested to give one single item of information founded on personal knowledge, he was forced to confess that he knew nothing, could remember nothing.

To follow this man's evidence any further would be superfluous. Enough has been given, I trust, for your useful paper, to prove that, throughout this entire matter, this man has given sanction to statements which he knew to be false. I will not indulge in the favorite reply of our venerable philosopher, Dr. GREELEY. The public will know in what esteem to hold such a man as the editor of the Sun.

Surely, no one can envy his present position, and I cannot conceive of one more truly contemptible and despicable than that held by him today.

What other motives than those of disappointment and envy he may have had we cannot know, but it is enough to say that of all the papers published in our City there is not one so entirely malicious and untrustworthy as the New-York Sun.

"Truth is stranger than fiction." Methinks the investigation of yesterday has afforded an ample evidence of the truth of this old adage. Verily, our editor's homecrings have received upon his own luckless head. Let us implore him to continue in the same line, that, ere long, through the contempt of all decent men, his sheet may sink out of existence. JUSTITIA.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, April 6, 1872.

Horace Greeley's "Consistency."

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In looking over my files of the Tribune, which I have (until lately) taken for over thirty years, I stumbled on the following brief article of June 30, 1869, which shows what it thought of Gen. GRANT when it was a Republican newspaper and before Mr. GREELEY'S head was turned with the idea of the Presidency. How different was the Tribune then from what it has been since it began to follow in the wake of the Sun's calumnies on Gen. GRANT and his Administration! and how prophetic are the closing words of the article below! "Whatever the 'screeneds' may think of Gen. GRANT, the strong arms of the people bore him triumphantly through the war and into the White House, and they still uphold and sustain him. They never failed and they never will."

GEN GRANT A FAILURE.

Upon Gen. GRANT'S accession to the Presidency, a great number of those who had supported his election, with some who had not, sought office at his hands, or expected him to bestow it unasked. He was unable to gratify their aspirations. Most of those whom he found in office claimed that they gave him their votes; some of them he saw fit to retain; while the laws of which he is the servant required him to reduce materially the cost of the public service and the number employed in it.

Our great civil war had rendered necessary a large increase of minor functionaries; the settlement of claims to pensions, &c., had excused the retention of hundreds in place up to the close of Mr. JOHNSON'S term; but now law and justice alike demanded that they be dismissed, to their own very natural disgust. Their lamentations, mingled with the howls of the disappointed, made up a doleful discordance, whereof the only meaning deducible was thus: "Gen. GRANT is found wanting—his Administration is a failure!"

"Failure!" how? in what? Have we not peace and plenty in the land? Is not our flag unrolled, and respected on every sea? Is not foreign fear of molester or threatener ended? Was foreign insurrection at home, or invasion from abroad? In which of our thirty-six States has the masses wanting work, discontented, suffering?

Consider our financial condition. Nearly every State and municipality paying off debts incurred in raising men for the war, while the national debt has been reduced twenty thirty millions in the four months that Gen. GRANT has had his hand on the helm. The public expenditures are falling off on every side, while the revenues (a portion of which, from foreign duties, must of unavoidable, must be considerably reduced in cost by the facilities for moving troops and stores afforded by our two Pacific Railroads.

Yes: Gen. GRANT has failed to gratify some extreme aspirations, and has thereby incurred some intense hatreds. These do not and will not fail; and his Administration will prove at least equally vital. We shall hear lamentations over his failure from those whose wish is father to the thought; but the American people let their pens unheeded. Their strong arms bore him triumphantly through the war and into the White House, and they still uphold and sustain him. They never failed, and never will!

THE VATICAN.

A Blessed Easter—Latest Papal Discourse.

Writing from Rome on March 29, the correspondent of the London Times says: "The Easter season, at which formerly the pomp and splendor of the Pontifical power shone out with the fullest efficiency, will be but dismal this year at the Vatican. Discomfited in Germany, the Ultramontane party finds no cause for contentment in Italy, while any hopes it may have based upon its supporters in France have received a severe blow from the postponement of discussion in the Versailles Assembly and the arrival of M. FOURNIER. The Pope himself betrays the disappointment and chagrin of his most passionate and fanatical supporters, if we may judge from some of his recent Dominical utterances, which bear the stamp of a troubled spirit and of a judgment curiously warped. You are aware that it is the custom of the Roman parish priests to collect a number of their parishioners on the Sunday, and to conduct them to the Vatican with addresses of congratulation or sympathy. It is unnecessary to add that the Romans get together for this weekly homage are not exactly the flower of the population in point either of position or of intelligence, and that few of them are above the social rank and mental standard of the people one may see any Sunday in St. Peter's devoutly kissing the Saint's toe. Pius IX., therefore, if he desires to be intelligible to his Sabbath visitors, does well to restrict himself to plain language and common-place sentiments. Occasionally, however, he breaks out in a political strain, and in speeches which seem intended rather for the outer world than for the small and simple flock to whom they are immediately addressed. This was the case on Sunday last, when certain parishioners of San Giovanni dei Fiorentini had the happiness to be admitted to the Pontifical presence. The theme of the Pope's discourse was the usurpation of his rights and the slavery in which he and his subjects were held. He quoted words written many years ago by MARCHESE D'ARGLIO, with reference to the extension of the Kingdom of Italy in the South, and which in substance were that it was by love, and not by arms, that such extension was sought, and that if any part of Italy had not will to join the common country, and range itself under the liberating Government, that Government had no desire to possess it. The Pope declared that the liberty which the recent invaders of his dominions boasted to have brought with them was a mere lie, and meant liberty for themselves and slavery for others; and, quoting the words of Christ to the Scribes and Pharisees, he denounced the pretended emancipators as slaves of sin. His opinion of Liberal and Constitutional Governments was summed up as follows:

What are certain Governments? They are like a pyramid of which the apex is dependent on a Cabinet, which is dependent on an Assembly, which in its turn is dependent on a thousand demons who have chosen it. All are slaves of sin; the Angel of God pursues them, and threatens them with a fiery sword; and the day will come when this exterminating angel will make known the justice of God and the effects of his mercy.

His Holiness is a very old man; he has had much to try him, and it is not surprising if his faculties are a little weakened by lapse of years and trouble, and if he occasionally forgets that scolding is undignified and that hard words are unlikely to repair his misfortunes. There is something petty in the attitude of the Vatican at the present time, and in the means it resorts to of showing its displeasure and avenging itself on its enemies, even at the expense of its own friends."

The Tenth National Bank to be Arraigned for a Misdemeanor.

A complaint has been lodged before United States Commissioner DAVENPORT, charging the Tenth National Bank with withholding United States funds for use. Subpoenas are issued to the officers of the bank and several Wall-street brokers, to appear this morning at 11 o'clock to testify against the bank, for a violation of the first section of the National Banking law, which makes it a misdemeanor for a National Bank to withhold national funds from circulation, and renders the bank liable to a fine of $1,000, and one-third of the moneys so detained from circulation. It is also understood that several

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

BROWN, Esq., referee, disposed of four lots of land situate on the north side of West One Hundred and Fifty-ninth-street, 100 feet east of Eleventh-avenue, together forming a plot in size 100 by 99.11. The lots were sold in one parcel, and purchased by J. J. LYONS, for $6,000. In reference to the legal sales of farms at White Plains and Pelham, Westchester County, conducted by JAMES M. REVIEW OF LAST WEEK'S BUSINESS.

During the past week, the market has given evidence of a somewhat better feeling, and, although marked by no special activity, the general result of the week's business may be said to be more encouraging than has been the case for some little time past. The principal auction consummated during the week was that conducted by WM. KENNELLY at the Exchange, on Wednesday, April 3, at which twenty-one lots, the property of WALTER ROOME, were sold by order of trustees. The lots, located respectively on Fifth-avenue, corner of One Hundred and Ninth-street, on Eighteenth-street, between Madison and Fourth avenues, on Ninety-third and One Hundredth streets, between Ninth and Tenth avenues, and on One Hundred and Twenty-third-street, between First and Second avenues, all brought fair prices, while for the Fifth-avenue lots, two in number, remarkable figures were realized, viz.: for lot on south-east corner of One Hundred and Ninth-street, $27,000, and for lot adjoining, $18,600. The total value of City real estate sold at the Exchange for the week ending with Saturday, April 6, was $446,196, as against the sum of $602,925, the figures for the six previous business days, ending with Saturday, March 30. In addition to these sales, JERE. JOHNSON, Jr., sold at the Exchange, on Tuesday, April 2, Brooklyn real estate to the value of $63,300, and property located in South Brooklyn to the value of $9,600; also, on Friday, April 5, property in Brooklyn, Williamsburg, and East New-York to the value of $39,450. On the street during the week the inquiry for all classes of realty has been stronger, and, taking all things into consideration, we are inclined to the opinion that the present week opens under favorable auspices. The sales proposed, as will be seen by a reference to the detailed list given below, are many of them of special interest, for the class of property to be offered at auction is of an unusually superior character. The attendance, therefore, on business days at the Exchange, should be large, and we hope to be able next week to give a good account in our summary of the results achieved.

RAILWAY COMPANY

REMAINING $5,000,000

OF THEIR

First Mortgage Sinking Fund 30 Years

7 PER CT. GOLD BONDS

90 and ACCRUED INTEREST.

THE ROAD runs from Buffalo to the Detroit River, connecting there with the Chicago and Canada Southern, now being built to Chicago, and will thereby form the SHORTEST TRUNK LINE BETWEEN BUFFALO AND CHICAGO, or, in other words, will be the SHORTEST LINE in the GREAT LINE OF TRAFFIC BETWEEN THE EAST AND WEST, connecting the GREAT SYSTEM OF RAILWAYS which diverge from Buffalo, Toledo and Chicago.

A branch also runs from St. Thomas to St. Clair where it forms connections with the various roads leading into the lumber and mineral regions of Michigan.

THE MAIN line from Buffalo to the Detroit River is 229 miles long. The branch from St. Thomas to St. Clair is 61 miles, and runs through the great Canada oil region.

OF THE entire line (290 miles) two hundred and twenty miles are graded, bridged and ready for the superstructure. The remaining 70 miles are under contract to be ready for the superstructure early in the Summer.

OF THE 200,000 ties required 200,000 are on hand and the remainder are coming in daily.

SIX CARGOES of iron for the RED TOWN of rails are delivered and paid for, and the balance contracted to be delivered early in the summer, those for the main line being STEEL, all sixty pounds to the yard.

ALL the materials for the stations and a part of the equipment are purchased.

TRACK-LAYING will be begun as soon as the frost is out of the ground.

The entire line will be ready for business on or before Dec. 31, 1872.

THE ROAD is being built by the most experienced railroad men of this country, and is confident of a profitable business for it from the day of its opening.

THE ROAD will be

33 MILES SHORTER THAN ANY OTHER ROAD,

either BUILT or in contemplation, between Buffalo and Chicago.

THE MAXIMUM GRADE on the entire line does not exceed FIFTEEN FEET to the mile, and Ninety-six per cent. of the Road IS STRAIGHT.

The Canada Southern (including its branch of 61 miles to St Clair) and the Chicago and Canada Southern, with their light grades, direct alignment, being the shortest route between Buffalo and Chicago, will admit of the most SPEEDY, ECONOMICAL and SAFE transit attainable for both passengers and freight.

The road thus far has been built by cash subscriptions, and the proceeds of the bonds now offered will complete and fully equip it. The principal and interest of the bonds are payable either in New-York, London, or Frankfort.

We have no hesitation in recommending the bonds AS A PERFectly SAFE as well as a PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.

SECOND MORTGAGE

8 PER CENT. CONVERTIBLE BONDS

OF THE

Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Railway,

AT 90 AND INTEREST.

From the time we first offered these Bonds they have been rapidly taken up by investors, leaving but a small amount now for sale, which, at the present price, we consider a very cheap and desirable security, as the road is in successful operation, and earning net more than the interest on all its Bonds. The business of the road is rapidly increasing. Over 1,400 miles of new roads are now building, connecting with and controlled entirely in the interest of this road, all of which will be completed at an early day.

These new roads, it is expected, will add at least 50 per cent. to the net receipts of this Company.

We have also other FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT SECURITIES for sale.

Stocks and bonds bought and sold on commission.

Accounts of banks, bankers and merchants received.

Another Dull and Wet Day in the City Yesterday.

Strange Attendance at the Churches—Dedication of St. Alphonsus'—Services by Dr. Bellows, Dr. Osgood and Dr. Foss.

Yesterday was a repetition of the preceding Sunday with the trifling difference that the rain was warm instead of cold. To the great swarm of toilers longing for a visit to the Central Park this fact was but a poor consolation. The capricious sprite that rules the weather has been untoward. Four Sundays out of five the rains have descended in a most unpleasant manner, and on the solitary Sunday when it did not rain, it was so cold that its brightness was hardly a sufficient temptation to leave the warmth of the domestic fireside. Yesterday's rain was more provoking than any other, because the past days had been so completely redolent of Spring, and Saturday evening, especially, had been so warm and genial that everybody was out promenading, and all went to bed in the full expectation of golden weather. But alas for human hopes! Instead of the brilliant blue sky and the wandering cloud islands, the eyes of unhappy risers were shocked by gloomy gray clouds that completely hid the sun, and their ears were tormented by the patter, patter of the rain upon the windows. It is some consolation to know that these rains are a necessity, for nothing else would melt the deep snows and warm the earth, which was frozen very deep down during the severe Winter.

Dr. Osgood's Address to Young Men at St. Peter's Church.

Rev. Dr. OSGOOD delivered an address to young men, last evening, at St. Peter's Church, taking for his text the seventh chapter of the First Epistle to the Corinthians, seventeenth verse: "As the Lord hath called every one, so let him walk." He commenced by contrasting the opinions of the ancients with those of the young men of today, who think they have only to make a fortune in this life, and do not consider they have a calling in the Kingdom of God. All have a vocation from God, being just as much called to be true to God's service as Paul was. Every one is called to be something. Everything God has made presents the mark of a purpose. Diffidence is not a very general fault with young people now, the great fault with them being that they are not as anxious to be something as to seem so. The preacher exhorted young men to be above the pettiness of the time, and not shirkers; but to estimate the dignity of their lives by their fidelity to their own position, and unite force of character and self-reliance within the Divine dispensation; to be true to themselves, and be content with what God has given them. Whatever covetous desire the gifts extended to others, if by the providence of God the illustrious dead had been called to great positions, so can we by the right use of our talents do good in our sphere. Among gifts he placed especial value on that of tending to the sick, and eulogized the brotherhoods and sisterhoods which had been formed for that object. He expressed sorrow that young men fail in life because they ask for that comparative ease in the beginning which should be the reward of years of labor and the crown of a useful work. While not under-valuing the importance of physical qualities, the speaker maintained that the moral and spiritual is the chief and nobler being. Alluding to the relation which should exist between man and woman, he condemned in scathing terms the loose opinions which were being enunciated in the present day. Loyalty, he urged, should actuate young men in the relations of life. When the necessity of religion is acknowledged, the people will be more prosperous. He attributed the prosperity of England to the circumstance that religion is part of the household and national feeling, and pervades all classes of society, and he knew no reason why young Americans should not recognize the God of the family and the nation, as well as the God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob.

Rev. Cyrus D. Foss on Christian Work in Cities.

Last evening Rev. CYRUS D. FOSS, D. D., delivered an address in the Church of the Holy Trinity, Madison-avenue and Forty-second-street, on the "Christian Work in Cities." In the course of his remarks he said, that the progress of the Christian Church in large cities is much slower in the present day than it was forty years ago, and surrounded by so many evils and drawbacks, the wonder is how she manages to hold herself against her adversaries. A clergyman of the Church of England has lately published a book, which is a perfect wail, lamenting the present state of Christianity in English cities. In 1811, there was only one city, London, with a population of over 100,000, now there are fourteen. In the same year there were only fifty-one towns with a population of over 10,000; now there are 165. Such is the increase of population in the towns, but in the agricultural districts it has decreased, modern inventions principally being the cause of the latter. And in all these large places vice and wickedness have increased to an astonishing extent. The writer further states that he has visited several large towns and cities at home and abroad, but he never saw types of humanity in so degraded a form as in some parts of London. There are quarters in this great metropolis where even policemen dare not walk through after nightfall; quarters where there is crime in every house, and these places are side by side with the most elegant parts of the city, as our Wooster-street is with a stone's throw of the Five Points. In Edinburgh, the British Athens, the poor are cooped up in horrid lairs, more like wild beasts than human beings, not even having a dog to lick their sores. In the mining districts of England known as the "Black Country" are men and women more ignorant than the heathen, who never heard the name of Jesus Christ mentioned in their lives. In the prisons of Scotland there were 1,686 prisoners. Of this number 446 were ignorant of the Lord's name, 997 did not know the name of the Queen, 1,000 could not name the months of the year, and 427 could not name 100. Such facts are startling, especially coming to us from Christian England. In our own cities, said he, crime is on the increase, and, it is feared, will soon have the upper hand of Christianity. But we have one way to conquer the sin and evil. Men are not born thieves. It is therefore remains for us to gather in the children of the Kingdom of Christ, and, if this can be done in every district, crime will not be known; children's institutions have always met with great success. If we all work hard and bring in the children to Christ, the next generation may be a Christian too, and the present sources or fountains of crime will be dried up.

Farewell Address of the Retiring Pastor of the Seventh-Street Church.

Rev. C. BACKMAN, of the Seventh-street M. E. Church, last evening took a farewell of the congregation over which he has been pastor for nearly three years. Entering upon the duties as he did at a time when it was feared the congregation would be broken up, it was, he said, a source of great pleasure to him that he was enabled to report favorably of the success of his mission. Not only was the church now free from debt, but there was also a small balance in the treasury. The membership had increased during the past year from 298 to 323, with thirty-two additional probationary members. The congregation had, during the past year, contributed, in addition to defraying the expenses of the church, $1,191 18 for purely benevolent objects. As a Church, the minister believed the members were harmonious and united, and he closed his discourse, which was based upon the text, Acts xx. 32: "and now I commend you to God, and the word of His grace," &c., with an admonition to the young and old to support the new minister who should be sent to them by the Conference. The address was spoken with much feeling, and at its close the choir sang the farewell hymn, "When shall we Meet Again?" After the services a large portion of the congregation remained behind to give their pastor a farewell shake of the hand. The Conference, which meets at Bridgeport on Wednesday next, will at that time assign the minister who is to succeed Mr. BACKMAN.

Dr. Bellows on the Fine Arts and Music as a Moral and Refining Influence.

Rev. Dr. BELLOWS delivered an interesting discourse last evening at All Souls' Church, having for his theme, "The Fine Arts and Especially Music as a Moral and Refining Influence." The text selected was a portion of the second verse of the third chapter of Acts, "The Gate of the Temple which is Called Beautiful." Dr. BELLOWS remarked that the present time is peculiarly auspicious for commenting upon a topic, which, although it may have little to do with the text, must prove interesting to those who keep pace with the public sentiment which demands that museums, art galleries, public libraries and those institutions which tend to refine the taste and improve the mind be kept open upon the Lord's day. It is not for a single man, even a divine, to decide what is proper, but for public opinion, regulated by a timely regard for religion, to take the initiative and bear the responsibility of the action which criticism compels. The public must ever be the final critic, whether of music, sculpture, painting, or poetry. An artist may not be the best critic of a portrait. He may err by paying too close attention to minor particulars. It is not necessary to see a picture that the nose should run into the pannel. Rather may the painting be the better seen by observation from a distance. Poetry is music to be criticised entirely by a place assumed on the scale and bars. The sculptor is likely to only to point out minor defects or beauties in the marble statues. The poet, while scanning lines of verse, looks only to the metre. The real critics are the people, for their wants cause the production of the statue, or painting, or Epic, and they alone can decide whether it be acceptable. The real value of works of art, then, depends upon the broad and comprehensive judgment of the public. Art has always been the reflection of the sentiment of the age. RAPHAEL painted to represent the out-growth of creeds and loves, hates and sorrows, of his time. The religious sensibilities of the age found a fit exponent in his hand. As great mountains seldom stand in plains by themselves, but are the outcropping of mountainous districts, so are these great master minds the growth of ages when popular thought supported them. Poetry is the father of arts. The exquisite creations of HOMER have descended to us from a time so far distant that the very personage seems almost a myth. The most brilliant epics in existence have been written by men between whose existence and ours dozens of centuries have rolled. Poetry has gone backward. Like every other art, it has been developed by the sentiment of the age and the times upon earnestness of purpose and a common aim, fused enmity and discord and rebellion, and throwing out the slack evolved, the best of all thoughts, having passed, the era of poetry has also departed, and like the shell from the sea which still retains its prismatic colors and a hollow echo, but which has been taken away from the sea nothing but emptiness remains. Music is the most modern of all arts, and all others have been concentrated in her. Like LAURA BRIDGMAN'S sense of touch, the loss of the other senses serve to make one the more acute. Music has been of slower development than other arts, being dependent upon perfection of mechanism. The other arts depend on two senses—music on one. All musical instruments are of comparatively recent invention. Few have been a hundred years in use. The piano of perfect construction has been but fifty years in use. The rude instruments of Judea, Greece, Turkey, and Egypt would drive the musical architect of the present day mad with their discord. The first period in which music began to be noticed as an art was between the years 370 and 700. During that time little progress was made toward cultivation. From 700 to 1000 formed another era, in which some little advance was made, but it was not until HANDEL united the Italian with German music that anything toward perfection was arrived at. Then a long list of musicians followed in close succession, and speedily raised the art to the dignity to which it is justly entitled. MOZART, the great melodious of musicians; SCHUBERT, the most emotional; BEETHOVEN, whose love for eternal beauty is the distinguished feature of his productions; MENDELSSOHN, a marvel of sweetness; all these form a brilliant galaxy, and are the exponents of the ages in which they proved. But in the future of music is not yet reached. The motto is still onward. Music is not instructive; it appeals to the emotions. We must not harness Pegasus to the plow. OFFENBACH may encnare with sensual strains, but the influence of well-selected music cannot be hurtful. Especially is it a powerful ally to religion.

Rev. Robert Collyer in Brooklyn.

About 2,500 persons were present last evening at the Academy of Music to hear Rev. ROBERT COLLYER, of Chicago, discourse on the social aspects of Christianity. His text was Acts the fourth chapter and thirty-second verse—"The multitude of them that believed were all of one heart and one soul; neither said any of them that the things he possessed were his own."

Papal Infallibility—Sermon by Rev. J. C. Meserve, of Brooklyn.

Rev. J. C. MESERVE, pastor of the State-street Congregational Church, Brooklyn, delivered, last evening, the third of a series of discourses upon the Roman Catholic Church, his special topic for the occasion being the doctrine of Papal infallibility. The text was taken from the first three verses of First Peter, chapter five, the spirit of which, the speaker said, is by universal acknowledgment disobeyed by all the Popes of the Roman Church. The Church of Rome is today the only absolute monarchy existing among Christian nations, and it is managed entirely by the Jesuits. When, on Sept. 8, 1869, there assembled at the Grand Council of the Vatican 767 Bishops from all parts of the world, brought together by the Pope's mandate to do homage to him, the important business they were to transact was prepared by the Jesuits and not by the Church. Time was when Protestants recognized a vital distinction between the Roman Church and the Papists. While the former has the Church for its watchword, the latter is incessantly struggling for the supremacy of the Pope. The Jesuits go to the profane length of denominating the Pope the Vice-God. The Pope is to them what Christ would be were he still on the earth. According to their own statements, if the Pope is fallible, the profession of faith in the Church rests upon a frail foundation, for it is impossible to accept the doctrine of Papal supremacy and not accept that of Papal infallibility. Mr. MESERVE then proceeded to demonstrate that the doctrine had neither scriptural nor historical foundation. Its only assumed foundation is a remark made by Christ to Peter promising to strengthen his faith, which was first in the year 680 applied by their Pope to the successors of Peter to shield his predecessor, Pope HONORIUS, from the charge of teaching heresy. The first ecclesiastical writer that gave a whole chapter to the Pope was THOMAS AQUINAS, in 1274. The doctrine is more generally accepted in the United States than in any other country, and this point was promised to be considered by the speaker next Sunday evening.

Dedication of the Redemptorist Fathers' Church of St. Alphonsus.

The new Catholic Church of St. Alphonsus, commenced little over a year ago by the Redemptorist Fathers in South Fifth-avenue, near Canal-street, was solemnly dedicated yesterday by the Catholic Archbishop of the Diocese, at 10½ A. M. The adjoining streets were filled with residents of the locality and delegations from the German Catholic up-town churches, and over a forest of umbrellas were borne aloft the flags of America, Ireland and Prussia, the Papal and numerous banners of the religious confraternities. A brass band performed outside the church gates. The Independent Rifle Corps, (German,) from Third-street, and a company of pioneers in blue jackets and Prussian helmets, formed two lines, between which the confraternities marched into the church and took their places. The pews are intended to seat 2,500 persons, but there were many more present.

The church is of the Romanesque order. It is built of brick, faced with Ohio brown stone, and the total outlay on it is estimated at $275,000, all of which is to be paid from weekly subscriptions of the parishioners. It is several times passed in beauty of its interior by any church in the City. The altar was imported from Munich at a cost of $12,000 in gold. It is a magnificent piece of workmanship, with massive dome overhead, and elegantly designed pillars of green marble. The side altars, of white marble, are all over, save where the painted statues of saints occupy niches. Around the church are the "stations" representing the Passion. These also were purchased in Munich, and cost $1,000. They are different from those in the other Catholic churches of the City, for instead of being paintings or engravings, they are carvings, the figures in full relief and colored. The organ was built in Boston and cost $15,000. Prof. BEIZER performed on it an overture from "Stradella," after which the procession entered from the outer door of the church chanting to the Litany of the Saints. First came acolytes with silver crucifixes and lighted tapers, then the clergy, and finally Archbishop MCCLOSKY, with his attendant priests, namely, Rev. Father STARKS as assistant; Rev. Father TETEMANN, as deacon; Rev. Father CHONEMANN, sub-deacon, and Rev. Father WEBER, of the Church of the Redeemer, Third-street, director of ceremonies. After the usual prayer, the procession again set out, and made the circuit of the church, the Archbishop sprinkling holy water at either side as he moved along. Then they returned to the chancel, and the Archbishop assumed his mitre and cope, put on the "pirella," and sat in his Episcopal chair at the left side of the high altar. Another procession then issued from the vestry, consisting of Bishop PERSICO, of Savannah, who was celebrant of the High Mass; Rev. Father FERETAG, assistant priest; Rev. Father SEADLER, deacon, and Rev. Father OMENZE, sub-deacon, together with a number of acolytes in surplices and surplice, and bearing lighted tapers. The incense made the rails swim filled with clergymen, among whom were Rev. Dr. McGlynn, Rev. Fathers Healy, Quin, Prio, Gross, Snett, Seaw, and Hespeline. During the musical portion of the service, the officiating prelate sat in a chair facing the congregation, at the right side of the altar. The orchestra consisted of thirty pieces, including violins, the performers being volunteers from the Philharmonic Society. Mr. FREDERICK BERWIN, organist to the Church of the Nativity, was director, and Mr. LIEBERS leader. The soloists were: Mrs. KALMAN, soprano; Miss HOLBROOK, alto; Mr. AMEND, tenor; and Mr. STAULD, basso. The chorus consisted of twenty-eight voices. The mass was from Andro, in F flat. At the offertory was performed the "Tremo Principium," from SCHIDEMATES, and at the close of the mass "The Heavens are Telling." After the Gospel was chanted in Latin by the deacon, Rev. JOSEPH HENNING, of St. Louis, ascended the pulpit and preached an English sermon. A sermon in German was then delivered by Rev. Wm. LOWEKAMP, of Philadelphia, and the Archbishop delivered an address at the close of the services.

The Counterfeit Money Swindle Again.

Yesterday Inspector GEORGE W. DILKE received a communication from the Chief of Police of St. Louis, which sets forth that several inhabitants of that city have been much annoyed of late by letters or circulars, signed SIDNEY MESSENGER, corner of Broadway and John-street, New-York City, offering to sell "counterfeit greenbacks" at the rate of $1,000 for $75. The writer of this communication has the audacity to say in a postscript, "For my integrity I refer you to the Masonic fraternity, of which I am an old member."

MAZZINI.

Last Days of the Agitator—His Illness and Death—The Funeral Honors.

Pisa (March 14) Correspondence of the London Daily Telegraph.

What a strange revenge time has worked upon MAZZINI! There is a ghastly irony in the arch-conspirator, whose feverish, restless life was spent in exile and proscription, being permitted to pass away at last in the dullest street of the quietest city of his native land. The man who, for more than forty years, has been hunted down in every country where he has sought refuge—who nowhere in Europe, save in England alone, has ever found rest for the sole of his foot—has died in utter obscurity, under the eyes of the very Government which he perpetually strove to subvert. The mystery in which he had wrapped himself as with a garment all his life continued to envelope him up to the moment when death, that dark dispeller of darkness, broke all the seals of his secrecy. On the day of his death the good people of Pisa learned for the first time that MAZZINI had long lived among them; and even those who ought to know best can't not make up their minds in which of two reports to believe—whether he arrived here last month, or whether he had been since November within their famous walls. The fact is that he first came in February, of last year, and remained till August, returning from Switzerland with the first frosts of November. The authorities, doubtless, knew perfectly well who the self-styled Englishman was, who spent all his days in study and all his evenings in the company of the self-same small family circle. But they were too glad to let him alone. It is not for the first time that they have winked at his presence. The chief difficulty of the Italian Government has been, not to find and seize him, but to find and not to molest him. It is reported that on one occasion the Neapolitan police put the Government into much perturbation by telegraphing that it was "impossible to avoid arresting MAZZINI." On another occasion—it was in 1857, after the notorious affair at Genoa—of the wheelbarrows of the insurgent dead, an attempt being made to seize the house of the MARQUESE PARETO, where MAZZINI was staying, was surrounded by the police, and a large military force in attendance, made a portentous show. The Questor, an old school-fellow of MAZZINI, formally demanded admittance in the King's name, when the door was opened by none other than MAZZINI himself, disguised as a servant. The Questor asks to speak to the Marquis, and is forthwith introduced by the obsequious flunkey. Did the Questor recognize his old friend? On this point rumor for once is uncertain; but history writes that diligent search was made throughout the house; that nothing was found but a stove full of ashes, the remains of papers just burnt; that the Marquis was carried off by the police in his carriage to make certain depositions, which meant nothing; and that the servant was left; and, if they had taken a leaf out of the book of the dreamer who pursue the impulse toward that United Italy which King and Government and people were alike striving to attain—what could they have done with him? In like manner he was suffered to remain in inoffensive quiet at Pisa. Dangerous though some timorous officials deemed him to be, the Government knew full well that he would be far more dangerous as a captive than as a freeman.

So complete was the incognito of MAZZINI to the outer world—well known though he was to the authorities—that even the doctor who attended him in his last illness did not know his patient. Only the day before he succumbed, the old English merchant speaking such pure Italian, when the sick man, placing his thin hands on his adviser's shoulder, said, with much emotion, "But I am an Italian. I am a Ligurian, and I love Italy; only, alas! I have lived for forty years in England. On the day of my death, I pray you, seize the tranquillity of the house where he at one time lived in Pisa learned for the first time that Dr. BROWN was no other than the redoubtable MAZZINI, and she refused to believe it. "Why, he was so gentle and kind," the poor woman cried, "and he would chat with me for an hour together." His home consisted of a few simply-furnished rooms at No. 42 in the Via della Maddalena; his long, solitary days were passed in reading, writing, and incessantly smoking, while his evenings were spent with the ROSSELLIS. Last month he was seized with a bronchial affection which lasted five days, during which the doctor feared would seriously injure his lungs. On his recovery he was taken into the special care of his best friends; but though his life was henceforth somewhat less solitary, it was not less hardworking. On the Wednesday before his death he had a long conversation with CAVERO, and an interview with the venerable ENRICO MYER. In the evening he wrote an article for the Unità Italiana, on RENAN'S book, La Réforme Intellectuelle et Morale de la France, which has since appeared, and which displays the master's hand in all its nervous power. This was his last work. Though he felt ill he did not send for the doctor—who came, however, the following morning, and found so much pulmonary congestion that he advised a consultation. To this end Dr. MINATI, Professor at the University of Pisa, was called in, and as the result of the conference the case was pronounced all but hopeless. On the 9th inst., the patient's brain was slightly affected; the incessant smoker fancied that he was enjoying his favorite nepenthe, and he moved his was dangerous and fatal. Yet, he would not be denied his pipe and taking it away. On Sunday, his death-day, he quite recovered the use of his faculties, but the knowledge of his state did not in the least affect his serenity of mind. A few minutes before 2 P. M. he made a sign that he wished to speak to the doctor, who was in the adjoining room. He raised his right hand, attempted to utter something; his head sank on the pillow. The restless spirit had passed peacefully away.

On the following day the body was visited by a few of the true friends who had revered the spirit by which it had been animated. The room in which it lay was on the first floor, and looks into one of those small gardens sparsely spotted with miserable, woebegone shrubs, dear to the Italian taste. The windows look to the south, and thus fulfil the first requisite for an invalid. The body lay on the bed, the blue and white stripes of the shirt staring out of the coarse sheet that covered the death-staring face were softened by that wondrous ineffable calm which follows the first light finger-touch of death. He looked, as some one has well remarked, like a great thinker who had fallen asleep, wearied only by the workings of his active brain. On Monday friends from a distance, Aurelio Saffi, Cairoli, and Saffi, had begun to arrive even before the news of MAZZINI'S death had begun to creep along the sleepy ways of this city of the dead, to take their last look at the pale lineaments they had known so well. Presently came a telegram from the Podesta of Genoa, expressed in that curt, abbreviated style of telegraphic form, which seems so stay Alfred A.
